

Council Opinion Split On New Police Chief

By NANCY HICKS and GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writers

Though not solidly behind Mayor Helen Bosalis' choice for police chief, Lincoln's City Council will apparently confirm the nomination of George K. Hansen next Monday.

The rank and file in the police department supports the selection of a man from outside the department, according to Jim Hill, the officer who just Tuesday night was elected president of the new Lincoln Police Union.

Two candidates from within the department, acting police chief Dale Adams and community relations officer Leighton Wessel, are considering leaving the department, although reserving a final decision for later.

Initial Reactions

These were some of the initial reactions Wednesday in the wake of Mrs. Bosalis' announcement of who she would like to have as the city's new police chief.

The 54-year-old Hansen, currently director of public safety in Sunnyvale, Calif., was the unanimous choice of a five-member selection committee.

The mayor made the former Nebraskan's name official Wednesday after informally giving the City Council her choice during a 7:30 a.m. closed meeting.

A council conflict was apparent during that early morning meeting with three councilmen (Dick Baker, Steve Cook and Bob Sikyta) upset at the choice and three (Sue Bailey, John Robinson and Bob Jeambey) solidly behind the mayor's selection.

Probably For Hansen

Tie-breaker Max Denney, out of town for the week, said Wednesday night that he will probably vote for the mayor's choice.

Reached at an Indiana motel, Denney said that if Hansen is well qualified and is unanimously endorsed by the selection committee, "It is my inclination to approve the appointment."

"I have great respect for Dale Adams and I was kind of hoping that he would get the job. But I'm also a firm believer in the fact that the mayor should have the right to make her own appointments . . . the council shouldn't try to make these appointments," said Denney, who could hold the deciding vote in Monday's confirmation proceedings.

The three other councilmen who have also been rooting for Adams toned down their official statements about the nomination from their earliest reactions.

Won't Offer Adams

Mrs. Bosalis made it plain both in the closed meeting and the press conference that should the council not confirm Hansen, she will start the selection process again. She will not offer Adams name as second choice.

But the three councilmen are apparently testing the community and political waters on this emotional issue, hoping that Adams may still have a chance.

"At this time I cannot support the mayor's nomination," said Baker, but left the door open for a change of heart. "Perhaps after further inquiry I may alter my position."

Baker, who feels that the Lincoln police department has qualified people to take over the job, also said he was concerned about Hansen's qualifications, including the fact that Hansen is willing to take a more than $10,000 pay cut in coming to Lincoln.

Hansen, who is making $34,946 in California, would be paid $24,232 as Lincoln's chief.

Acknowledging a faction split in the current department, with some officers aligned behind Wessel and some behind Adams, Baker said that in other communities the factions have grown even stronger when an outside man was brought in.

Sikyta said he is looking to citizen comments to help him make up his mind by Monday.

"I plan to read the dossier we got today, examine the committee's recommendation and get input from the people of Lincoln."

"At the same time it's hard for me to justify stepping over a person who I believe has run a good, organized police department for years," Sikyta said.

Cook Disappointed

Cook also said he hasn't yet made up his mind, but admitted that he is disillusioned by the committee's offer of only one recommendation.

"It just seemed to me that out of 90 candidates that there should be more than one qualified person."

Baker feels that there should have been a second choice even if that alternative was not Adams. "I don't have any quarrel with the man (Hansen)," said Baker. "But we (council members) don't have any choice."

Baker said he will rely on citizen reaction and a study of Hansen's qualifications for his decision. (Continued on Page 29)

Moderates, Liberals Make Pitch To Ford

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of moderate and liberal Republican senators asked President Ford on Wednesday to let them have some influence in his 1976 election campaign.

They also recommended keeping Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller on the ticket.

After the session at the White House, three who talked with reporters said that they believed they had gotten a pledge from Ford to get their point of view represented.

Sen. Clifford Case, R-N.J., said 12 of the 14 members of the "Senate Wednesday Club," who hold regular Wednesday luncheon meetings and represent 162 out of 270 electoral votes needed for election, met with Ford to talk party strategy.

Giving their support to a Ford-Rockefeller ticket, Case said they had expressed some concern over recent comments by Ford's campaign manager Bo Callaway, who indicated that Rockefeller would be a liability to Ford in the South.

Case said that Callaway's comments were "perhaps the exuberance of a new man that has been corrected." And he added that it was "quite desirable that it should be corrected."

Sen. Jacob J. Javits, R-N.Y., expressed the support of the group for a Ford-Rockefeller ticket as having "the best chance of winning" because it was a "sound, effective team."

Case said the group expressed concern that Ford was tailoring his campaign to smaller states with conservative views and that states with heavy electoral votes and huge populations were "not being adequately reflected."

The senators were asked whether they were implying that Ford was becoming a captive of conservatives.

While declining to go along with that interpretation, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., said, "there was some concern our input was not articulated and we wanted to make it perfectly clear our input would be reflected."

Ford "made it clear he wanted it," Percy added. Percy said that the Republicans needed to attract "discerning Democrats and independents" in order to win the election.

Energy Blueprint Said Biased

Washington (UPI) — Conservationists charged Wednesday a federal blueprint for U.S. energy research through the end of this century was biased in favor of atomic energy and placed insufficient emphasis on known ways to cut energy consumption.

The report, prepared by the Energy Research and Development Administration, called for coal and nuclear power to meet increasing amounts of America's needs through the year 2000, although it retreated from previous estimates that the atom would be the single long-range main source of energy.

Testifying at a hearing of the President's Council on Environmental Quality, a series of spokesmen from environmental and consumer organizations said less emphasis should be given to nuclear power and more should be placed on conservation and the development of alternative sources.

But a representative of the Atomic-Industrial Forum, the trade association of the nuclear industry, disagreed. No other energy source except the atom can meet U.S. needs swiftly, safely, and at a lower cost than oil and coal, said Howard Larson, AIF vice president.

Larson said nuclear fission energy should be developed as quickly as possible and praised the federal plan for emphasizing fission power and expanded use of coal as the main immediate answer to U.S. energy independence goal.

"We cannot afford to substitute an illusion of inexpensive and clean solar energy or fusion energy for the practical development of a breeder technology which has undergone significant study in this country and abroad for over 30 years."

Presenting the opposing view, James Cubie of Ralph Nader's Congress Watch, charged that ERDA was guilty of "misrepresentation by omission in a number of areas."

"Because ERDA failed to include one major energy source — conservation — in its limited nuclear development scenario, it created the misleading impression that limiting nuclear energy development was an unrealistic goal at best, and foolhardy at worst," Cubie said.

Similar views were presented by Thomas L. Kimball, executive vice president of the National Wildlife Federation, who said he found "a conscious bias in favor of nuclear power" in the ERDA blueprint.

Kimball said ERDA played down the potential for solar and geothermal energy presented in two studies made last year for the Federal Energy Administration.

An expert testifying for the Sierra Club, Jerome Kohl of North Carolina State University, said ERDA appeared concerned only with expensive technological solution and not with the implementation of already known ways to conserve energy.

FAIR PIE CONTEST . . . finds Kirk Gungan, 12, of Paxton checking on opponent.

Cool Temperatures Give Boost To Fair

The Nebraska State Fair cooled down and drizzled its way to a narrow edge on last year's attendance numbers Wednesday as 32,500 people paraded through the gates.

The day was set aside especially for senior citizens and Fair Manager Henry Brandt guessed at least half of those at the fair were 60 or over.

The senior citizens' chorus from Holdrege was a hit with the oldsters, who flocked to the Open Air Auditorium to both hear the music and escape the rain-drops.

Good Ole Music

Chorus director Mrs. Emil Schultz explained that no one under 60 can sing with the band, which specializes in nostalgic and "good ole" tunes.

Elsewhere on the fairgrounds, the marching band from Weeping Water strutted in the rain, playing with undiminished enthusiasm. Kids on horses sat in their saddles covered with plastic, in raincoats or edged their mounts under the eaves of the big auditorium to keep dry while waiting their turn in the 4-H horse show.

Nobody but nobody complained about the rain and cooler weather.

The cool weather gave Brandt a chance to achieve his goal of 600,000 total attendance at the fair after all. His current running total of 417,500 is just a shade above last year's 416,000 on the same day.

The rains stopped long enough during the afternoon to allow 11 giant teams of horses to compete in the Draft Horse Pulling Contest.

The favorites of the crowd, Ted and Pat owned by Harold Gilbert of Shelbina, Mo., won the lightweight class for the eighth consecutive year. The team is aging but strong enough to easily move a 6,000-pound sled 18 feet.

The team of Bill and Dick, owned by Joe Hall of Bronson, Kan., pulled 6,600 pounds 8 feet 3 inches to take first place in the heavyweight division.

Horsemen complained about exhaust fumes from tractors being unloaded from trucks for the evening tractor pulling contest and cheered lustily when the 45 horsepower tractor assigned by the fair board to move the sled for horsemen was unable to budge the sled at 6,000 pounds. Cries of "Get a horse" rang throughout the grandstands as embarrassed officials rounded up a huge road grader to move the sled.

FFA Animals Arrive

Future Farmers of America (FFA) members weighed in their sheep and hogs throughout the afternoon. Some cattle were coming in throughout the day but were not due until 8 a.m. Friday. Dairy cattle are also due early Friday for the dairy judging.

Open class activity was limited to the Dorset and Shropshire sheep.

Brandt said he was very pleased with the livestock entries as the second half of the fair began. "There isn't a single category that is below last year's entries. I don't know the reason but I am delighted," he said.

The fair has a huge Hereford show called the Register of Merit or ROM show which has drawn cattle from many states to the Nebraska State Fair.

The Shorthorn, Galloway and Limousin cattle breeds are also running shows during the last half of the fair in the open class arena.

The grandstand events for all day Thursday are various forms of tractor pulling contests, including hot rod tractors — mechanical monsters created in farm shops from assorted tractor, auto, tank and even airplane parts.

The powder puff derby with women drivers will be Thursday evening and the stock farm tractors will pull after that.

Lincoln Electric Rates May Rise 25%

By GERRY SWITZER
Star Staff Writer

Residential rates for electricity may be boosted as much as 25% for Lincoln users beginning with the February billing instead of an earlier estimated hike of 10% to 12%.

According to Walter Canney, Lincoln Electric System (LES) administrator, the analysis of wholesale rates is not yet completed but reports received this week indicate a 70% increase in wholesale rates — about twice the anticipated increase.

He said a recommendation will be made in December after further analysis of the Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) wholesale power costs and the increase will probably come with the February billing to consumers.

"It is alarming," he said, adding that he doesn't foresee "any ending in sight."

The only consolation for Lincoln users, he said, is that Lincoln rates will still be below other places in the state and throughout the nation.

But for the average Lincoln residential user, the cost will increase between $3.97 and $4.74 per month, depending upon the time of year.

Canney explained that the summer rate is higher than the winter rate, so the bill for the average user of 670 kilowatt hours per month will jump from $18.96 to $23.70 in summer months and from $15.86 to $19.83 in winter months.

The average Lincoln resident will be paying about 20% more for electricity, gas, water and sewer and garbage service with recent hikes.

Cengas announced last week that due to a rate increase by Northern Natural Gas Co., which serves Lincoln and 360 other Nebraska communities, monthly bills would be increased about 8% effective Oct. 27.

For the average Lincoln residential user, this is a hike from $16.94 per month to $18.44.

However, according to Cengas spokesman Clancy Woolman, these hikes are subject to refund which may be forthcoming after a Federal Power Commission ruling. Cengas and others have intervened in the request for higher rates by Northern Natural.

With the anticipated electricity hike and earlier increase in water and sewer rates and a fifty-cent per month hike in garbage services, the average resident will be paying about $48.91 per month during the winter months for these services as compared with the previous amount of $40.53.

	Before Hike	After Hike

U.S. Concern Increases For Viets Seeking To Return

©The New York Times

Washington — The Ford administration has become increasingly concerned about 1,802 South Vietnamese seeking to return to their homeland from temporary quarters on Guam.

Those seeking repatriation were among the more than 130,000 Vietnamese evacuated from South Vietnam before the completion of the Communist takeover last May. They have been in American custody since then.

From the outset of the evacuation last April, the administration has made it clear that anyone seeking later repatriation would be assisted in his return by the United States, Julia Vadala Taft, director of the interagency task force on Vietnam, said Wednesday.

However, not a single refugee who wanted to return has been accepted by the Communist government in Saigon since it took power last spring, she said.

As a result, frustration among those quartered on Guam has reached a dangerous level, she said, and "we have become really concerned."

Mrs. Taft cited an incident last Sunday in which Vietnamese demonstrators burned a barracks and a guard hut on Guam. Four U.S. marshals were struck by rocks during the incident.

American officials believe there may be a small group of agitators — perhaps 20 or 25 — among those seeking repatriation who could be acting on orders from Vietnamese officials in Hanoi to stir further trouble among those seeking repatriation.

One American official cited as evidence recent broadcasts from the Hanoi radio asserting that only those Vietnamese on Guam who actively demonstrated against "Yankee Imperialists" would obtain repatriation.

Mrs. Taft said there was sufficient tension and frustration among the Vietnamese on Guam even without the incitement of agitators.

Hoffa's Foster Son Silent

Detroit (AP) — James Hoffa's foster son refused to answer questions Wednesday during a seven-minute appearance before a federal grand jury probing the disappearance of the ex-Teamsters president, his attorney said.

Charles "Chuckie" O'Brien, a Teamsters organizer raised by the Hoffa family, refused to say whether he took the Fifth Amendment during his brief appearance.

O'Brien's attorney, James Burdick, charged the government with using the Hoffa case to develop unrelated cases against Teamsters officials "at the cost of a significant investigation into the disappearance of James R. Hoffa."

Today's Chuckle

O'Brien, 41, is considered a key figure in the Hoffa disappearance. He was driving a car belonging to the son of a reputed Mafia chieftain near the restaurant where Hoffa was last seen on July 30.

A sworn FBI affidavit, used in connection with the seizure of the auto, states there is probable cause to believe O'Brien used the vehicle to "facilitate an abduction of Hoffa."

Burdick blasted the government for leaking "innuendoes, unsupported hypotheses and groundless accusations" about O'Brien to the news media. He also protested not being permitted to enter the grand jury room with his client.

12 Rail Cars Derailed

Twelve cars of a 96-car Rock Island Lines freight train derailed Wednesday night, throwing cars down an embankment in a residential area and knocking down power lines, railroad workers said.

According to railroad employees, the train was northbound across Essex Rd. just west of Tipperary Trail when the accident occurred. The cars were fully loaded, many with plywood, they said.

Police said no one was injured. Lincoln Electric System workers said power lines were downed but no outages were reported.

Neighborhood residents reported hearing "grinding, groaning" noises just before the accident. One man said he looked out his kitchen window and saw "sparks flying everywhere."

The cause of the derailment has not been determined.

American officials believe there may be a small group of agitators — perhaps 20 or 25 — among those seeking repatriation who could be acting on orders from Vietnamese officials in Hanoi to stir further trouble among those seeking repatriation.

One American official cited as evidence recent broadcasts from the Hanoi radio asserting that only those Vietnamese on Guam who actively demonstrated against "Yankee Imperialists" would obtain repatriation.

Mrs. Taft said there was sufficient tension and frustration among the Vietnamese on Guam even without the incitement of agitators.

Hoffa's Foster Son Silent

Detroit (AP) — James Hoffa's foster son refused to answer questions Wednesday during a seven-minute appearance before a federal grand jury probing the disappearance of the ex-Teamsters president, his attorney said.

Charles "Chuckie" O'Brien, a Teamsters organizer raised by the Hoffa family, refused to say whether he took the Fifth Amendment during his brief appearance.

O'Brien's attorney, James Burdick, charged the government with using the Hoffa case to develop unrelated cases against Teamsters officials "at the cost of a significant investigation into the disappearance of James R. Hoffa."

O'Brien, 41, is considered a key figure in the Hoffa disappearance. He was driving a car belonging to the son of a reputed Mafia chieftain near the restaurant where Hoffa was last seen on July 30.

A sworn FBI affidavit, used in connection with the seizure of the auto, states there is probable cause to believe O'Brien used

the vehicle to "facilitate an abduction of Hoffa."

Burdick blasted the government for leaking "innuendoes, unsupported hypotheses and groundless accusations" about O'Brien to the news media. He also protested not being permitted to enter the grand jury room with his client.

12 Rail Cars Derailed

Twelve cars of a 96-car Rock Island Lines freight train derailed Wednesday night, throwing cars down an embankment in a residential area and knocking down power lines, railroad workers said.

According to railroad employees, the train was northbound across Essex Rd. just west of Tipperary Trail when the accident occurred. The cars were fully loaded, many with plywood, they said.

Police said no one was injured. Lincoln Electric System workers said power lines were downed but no outages were reported.

Neighborhood residents reported hearing "grinding, groaning" noises just before the accident. One man said he looked out his kitchen window and saw "sparks flying everywhere."

The cause of the derailment has not been determined.

Coal Walkout Ebbs; Chicago Teachers Strike

By United Press International

Some 20,000 miners, bucking a back-to-work tide, kept most of southern West Virginia's coal mines closed Wednesday. Louisiana longshoremen were back at work loading grain on a Soviet union-bond ship.

Prospects brightened for settlement of a three-day strike of flight attendants against National Airlines but there appeared to be a standoff in the city firemen's strike in Berkeley, Calif.

Teachers strikes delayed opening of Chicago schools and spread through dozens of schools in Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, New York, California and New Jersey. In New York City, a strike of stage performers cancelled the first day of rehearsals for the Metropolitan Opera's season opening Oct. 13.

Efforts by dissident miners to shut down the coal industry across the nation collapsed and United Mine Workers officials in Washington estimated all but 20,000 miners in southern West Virginia had returned to their jobs. At one point some 60,000 miners in at least half a dozen states had been idled.

Federal court fines against the UMW mounted to more than $900,000 and the number of pickets at mines declined. As picket lines came down, miners went back to the pits.

"I been hearing the same old things from a bunch of hotheads who don't really know what they're striking about," one veteran Kentucky miner said after he went back to work.

Some defiant strike leaders vowed, however, that they would not return to work until all penalties against the union were lifted and they win the right to strike on local issues without the threat of court injunctions.

Abiding by a federal court injunction, dockworkers at Reserve, La., resumed loading 20,000 tons of wheat on the Anna M. The job was expected to be completed Thursday.

Vic Hess, a lawyer for the International Longshoremen's Association, said "the larger issue still is one to be settled." He predicted ILA members will fight attempts to make them load any more vessels carrying wheat to Russia.

Representatives of National Airlines and the Association of Flight Attendants scheduled meetings with a federal mediator in Washington Wednesday to try to settle the strike which has idled the airline's 55 jet airliners since Monday.

Michael Garko, AFA secretary-treasurer, said in Miami the talks have become "much more positive" and "perhaps a settlement can be reached in a reasonable time."

In Berkeley, a union spokesman for the city's 150 striking firemen said his men were becoming irritable because there was no indication joint contract negotiations were about to resume. The spokesman, Jack Rinne, said city officials were "acting hard-headed" in separate talks with a state conciliator.

The strike of the 26,744-member Chicago Teachers Union extended summer vacation for some 530,000 school children. Teacher strikes kept more than 100,000 youngsters out of schools in Pennsylvania, some 80,800 in Rhode Island, and lesser numbers in several other states.

The New York walkout by members of the American Guild of Musical Artists stemmed from a dispute over whether the Met can bind performers to work extra weeks if the season is extended without guaranteeing that the additional work will in fact be available. The guild asked for services of a federal mediator.

Bill Designed To Cure Construction Labor Chaos

Washington (UPI) — Labor Secretary John Dunlop announced Wednesday legislation to overhaul collective bargaining in the construction industry by establishing a national labor-management committee that could impose a cooling-off period of up to 30 days in any strike.

Dunlop said the bill, written during months of secret negotiations with labor and management, would be introduced in the House and Senate in a day or two. An aide predicted it would pass like a "greased pig."

Promoters Recruited

San Juan, P.R. (UPI) — The government Tourist Development Co. is recruiting Puerto Rican students at overseas colleges to act as volunteer tourism promoters for the island during out-of-class time.

The bill was designed to cure the current chaotic situation in the construction industry where separate locals and crafts bargain separately, vying with each other for better settlements and upsetting the progress of work on a particular building site with numerous strikes.

"The proposed machinery does not constitute wage and price control, nor is it a form of compulsory arbitration," Dunlop said, adding that it applies only to labor organizations and contractors already regularly engaged in collective bargaining.

The bill would establish a national construction industry collective bargaining committee comprised of 10 representatives of management, 10 labor leaders and three neutral members, all appointed by the president.

Every craft local would have to notify the national committee 60 days before the expiration of a contract and the committee then could elect to take jurisdiction in the dispute.

The committee could either meet with the negotiators themselves or could instruct the national unions and national contractor associations to intervene. If no agreement is reached it could impose a cooling-off period of up to 30 days after the expiration of the old contract.

In the event that the national labor organizations become involved in the local negotiations, they would have the right to approve or disapprove of any resulting agreement.

The legislation would run for a period of five years, covering some 3,000 to 4,000 collective bargaining agreements reached each year on behalf of about 2.5 million unionized construction workers.

Play Produces Real Life Drama

LONDON (AP) — In the latest high school version of "My Fair Lady" enacted in Britain, a 16-year-old Liza Doolittle has eloped with a 15-year-old bit player. The worried parents of both teen-agers are searching the country for them.

Teresa Giggins was the star of the school play in Luton, north of London, and David Duncan had only a small walk-on part as a bystander in a crowd scene. But he got the girl in the real life drama.

Parents said the couple fell in love behind the scenes and that David had secretly bought Teresa an engagement ring for $55.

Teresa wrote her parents a note saying, "We love each other, and we are going away. Please don't try to find us. I love you both."

Police in London and in Edinburgh, Scotland, were alerted to search for the runaways.

David's father, toolmaker Herbert Duncan, 57, told newsmen in Luton Tuesday night he was preparing to go to Scotland to join the search.

"I don't know if the romance in the play went to their heads," he said, "but they have really fallen for each other. We are desperately worried about them. They are still children."

Teresa's father, Eric Giggins, 49, a truck driver, said, "They had obviously been planning carefully for months and saving money. They told an incredible number of lies to keep their secret."

"They started going out with each other soon after the play," Giggins added. "They had a secret engagement ring we never knew about."

Teresa left school in July and worked in a store for the summer. She planned to start secretarial college. David too took a summer job.

Both youngsters had spent holidays in Edinburgh. They were last seen at a London railroad station clutching a suitcase and waiting for a northbound train.

Two Indicted In Kidnaping

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — A Westchester County grand jury indicted two Brooklyn men Wednesday in the kidnaping last month of whisky heir Samuel Bronfman 2nd.

Dominic Byrne, 52, operator of a small limousine service, and Mel Patrick Lynch, 37, a New York City fireman, were indicted on charges of kidnaping, grand larceny by extortion and possession of a weapon.

Meany Calls McGovern 'Farmer In Suede Shoes'

Washington (UPI) — AFL-CIO President George Meany had biting words Wednesday for Sen. George S. McGovern and said organized labor will continue speaking out on foreign policy and opposing the grain sale to Russia.

Addressing the convention of the Seafarers International Union, Meany defended the boycott he is spearheading against shipment of the grain, and hurled harsh words at Agriculture Earl Butz and Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Meany dismissed McGovern — the South Dakota Democrat who criticized his call for reassessment of U.S. foreign policy — as "a farmer who wears suede shoes."

"Come what may," said Meany, "we're going to continue to have our say on American foreign policy."

Saying foreign policy should follow the lines of the "good old Yankee principle of give-and-take," Meany asked: "Should we not say 'as you do with the oil which we need so shall we do with our grain which you need'?"

Meany broke with tradition in 1972 by withholding support of the AFL-CIO leadership from the presidential candidacy of McGovern, who said Monday that Meany was trying to "play God over the national interest" in encouraging the grain shipment boycott.

Meany retorted in his Wednesday speech that union dockworkers are only trying to protect American consumers — repeating his contention that the sale of about $10 million tons of grain to Russia will push up American food prices.

Swinging his aim toward Butz, Meany noted that the agriculture secretary predicted the grain sales to Russia three years ago would have no effect on food prices, whereas they rose sharply.

Now, he said, Butz is saying the current deal will have only a "minimal" impact on prices.

"Again we have the same phony gobbledygook from Earl Butz," Meany said. "He has this quality that the Commies have developed so well of stonewalling."

As for Kissinger, Meany said: "If we have a foreign policy it's being kept secret from the American people. I don't think Henry knows what it is until he gets up in the morning."

"The foreign policy of this country affects the daily lives of all the American people. The time has come, I believe, for a real reassessment of what our foreign policy means."

Butz Sends Congress Bill On Grain Inspection

Washington (UPI) — Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz Wednesday sent Congress a bill designed to "restore integrity" to the nation's scandal-racked grain inspection system through tighter federal controls.

The plan would retain the present system under which all initial grain inspection is handled by federally licensed private and state agencies.

But it would step up federal supervision of the private and state inspectors and would impose a stiff new conflict of interest rule on private inspectors "to restore integrity to our national grain inspection program," the Agriculture Department said.

The bill would authorize the Agriculture Department to ban grain inspection for trading firms which violate the federal grain standards act or are convicted of violating allied laws. It would also allow the agency to monitor the condition of American grain when it arrives in foreign ports.

Clothing Sold By Pound

Boston (UPI) — Clothing at 97 cents a pound. Linen for 59 cents a pound.

That's a new gimmick being used by Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industrial Thrift Store to sell clothing. So far it's produced rising sales.

Thrifty mothers can outfit a child for less than $2.

"I think it's a great idea. You buy a lot more because you get a lot more for your money," said Mrs. Grace Theriault of South Boston.

During the past week, thousands of budget-minded shoppers have taken advantage of the new pricing program. They load their arms with linens and apparel of assorted size, style and colors which are weighed at the cash registers.

"Of course you save more by buying by the pound than by the piece. I'm a mother of six grown children and I've dressed them a lot here so I know," said Mrs. Dorothy M. Chisom of Mattapan.

The 97-cent-a-pound clothing includes just about everything — slacks, gym suits, shirts, dresses, underwear, skirts, socks, winter wear and bikinis.

Linens at 59 cents a pound include towels, sheets, pillowcases, bed spreads, curtains, tablecloths and wash cloths.

Or, put simply, it could mean a dress for 48 cents, two blouses for 72 cents, two towels or a sheet for 59 cents, depending on weight.

Boston is the birthplace of the non-profit Goodwill Industries, which has outlets throughout the United States. For the past 80 years, Goodwill thrift stores have offered customers savings with proceeds paying wages to handicapped people enrolled in Goodwill's vocational rehabilitation programs.

Teen-agers recently stormed the Boston store for a dungaree bonanza featuring thousands of blue jeans at 59 cents a pound.

Thomas Kleppe

Kleppe Nominated

Bismarck, N.D. (AP) — Thomas Kleppe, administrator of the Small Business Administration and a wealthy, former two-term North Dakota congressman, has been nominated secretary of the interior, Sen. Milton R. Young, R-N.D., said Wednesday.

The post became vacant when former Wyoming Gov. Stanley Hathaway resigned for health reasons.

Israeli Parliament OKs Accord; Syria Criticizes It

By The Associated Press

The Israeli parliament voted 70-43 Wednesday to approve the Sinai agreement worked out in the latest shuttle tour by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. Opponents charged the pact was a step toward war and a surrender of independence to America.

In Damascus Wednesday night, Syria condemned the pact as a "setback to the march of Arab struggle" in an official statement issued after a meeting of ruling Baath party leaders. Kissinger had briefed President Hafez Assad for about three hours earlier in the day.

The Syrian statement said the pact "brought in the U.S. as a party to the Middle East conflict."

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin denied that use of U.S. technicians at listening posts along the Sinai front amounted to Vietnam-style military involvement. "Israel is not asking American troops to fight in its defense," he told the Knesset — or parliament.

The vote — with seven abstentions — cut across party lines, reflecting the disunity in Israel over the accord worked out on Kissinger's shuttles between Israel and Egypt.

About 10,000 persons demonstrated outside the Knesset in favor of the agreement. Israel's top physicist, Yuval Ne'eman, resigned as chief military scientist in protest against it.

Israeli and Egyptian officials and military chiefs will sign the agreement Thursday in Geneva, Switzerland.

In Washington Republican leaders predicted Congress will approve the stationing of American technicians in the Sinai, although some Democrats still withheld firm support. "My gut feeling is that I think we ought to go along with it, but I want to be briefed before I take a final position," said House Democratic Leader Thomas O'Neill, D-Mass.

"There seems to be a growing support for stationing an American civilian volunteer force in Sinai," the House minority leader, Rep. John Rhodes, R-Ariz., said.

Meanwhile Kissinger was flying home to give Congress his report on the agreement and counter concern that the United States could drift toward another Vietnam situation by placing 200 surveillance technicians in the Sinai.

Kissinger left the Middle East after two final stops in Jordan and Syria. A cool reception in Amman by Jordan's King Hussein and lack of commitment from Assad in Damascus dampened the U.S. delegation's sense of success.

Swap Solves Mixup

De Queen, Ark. (UPI) — Two families from Arkansas and Oklahoma who took the wrong babies home from the hospital more than a month ago exchanged babies Wednesday, said a hospital official.

"The swap apparently went without a hitch," he said, and a member of the board of De Queen General Hospital, where the two baby boys were born, confirmed the exchange.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Fisk of Lockesburg, Ark., and Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Tabor of Broken Bow, Okla.

Attorneys for the families and the hospital were present when the swap was made about 2:30 p.m., said the board member who asked not to be identified.

The Oklahoma source said the baby boys were born July 26 and a nurse apparently delivered them to the wrong room after circumcision.

The visit to Jordan was marred particularly by the U.S. Congress' refusal in July to permit Amman to buy 14 Hawk missile batteries. U.S. officials said there is "a very high probability" that Jordan will turn to the Soviet Union for an air defense system if the deal does not go through, and the Ford administration was preparing to resubmit to Congress its request for approval of the missile sale.

Slayton 'Fine' Upon Check-Out

Houston (AP) — Astronaut Donald K. Slayton was released from the hospital Wednesday, nine days after surgeons removed a small benign tumor from his left lung.

Slayton, 51, walked from the M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute and said, "I am still a little sore, but I feel fine."

Army Nixes Goncalves

Lisbon — The general assembly of Portugal's army demanded that the president cancel his appointment of Gen. Vasco Goncalves, the Communist-backed former premier, as armed forces chief of staff. The assembly, which has half the seats in the general assembly of the armed forces, decided to boycott its next meeting, thus apparently crippling the scheduled Friday vote on a new ruling on the High Council of the Revolution. The secretary general of the Socialist Party, Mario Soares, appealed to President Francisco da Costa Gomes for a quick decision to cancel the Goncalves appointment.

Wage Restrictions OK'd

London — The British Labor government and its allies in the union movement won a major victory Wednesday when the Trades Union Congress voted by a 2 to 1 margin to approve sharp restrictions on new wage increases.

Mountaineer Young

Eight-year-old Christel Bochaty added her 4 feet, 1 inch of height to the 15,700-foot altitude of Mont Blanc last week. French officials confirmed Wednesday, and thereby became the youngest person ever to climb to the top of Europe's highest peak.

Oil Action Delayed

Washington — Democratic leaders in the House and Senate have decided to postpone action on oil prices until after President Ford's expected veto of the bill to extend price controls on most domestic oil for six months and Senate action to override it. The Senate vote is expected to be close, and if it overrides the veto, the House is expected to follow suit quickly. Meanwhile, House Speaker Carl Albert of Oklahoma told reporters, there is no point in trying to negotiate a compromise with the Administration.

Penn Central To Settle

New York — A $12.6 million proposed settlement to end litigation against former directors and officers of the Penn Central Co., their investment bankers and accountants, and two real estate subsidiaries, has been agreed to by lawyers for the plaintiffs — the bankrupt railroad's trustees, debenture holders and shareholders.

Tax Changes Scanned

Washington — The House Ways and Means Committee began consideration of an extensive revision of the tax laws with examples of recent tax returns of persons with high incomes who legally paid little or no federal-income tax. A doctor with $105,000 in income paid none, a stockbroker with $181,000 paid only $1,000, and a business executive with $448,000 paid $1,200.

Beame Raps Plan

New York — The city's major banks agreed to a part of the Municipal Assistance Corporation's financial plan to forestall what could be the city's imminent default. Mayor Abraham Beame denounced the part that would virtually eliminate his budgetary powers. On the eve of the special legislative session in Albany, Gov. Hugh L. Carey was trying to pull together the elements of some form of MAC legislation to avoid default.

Russia Takes Credit For Defeating Japan In World War

The New York Times

Moscow — The Soviet Union, which lavished praise upon itself last spring on the 30th anniversary of the defeat of Nazi Germany, is now taking credit as well for the defeat of imperialist Japan.

In an order Wednesday marking the 30th anniversary of the Japanese formal surrender, Soviet Defense Minister Andrei A. Grechko declared that "the Soviet people and its valiant armed forces under the leadership of the Communist Party played the decisive role in achieving this victory."

Grechko's order was circulated Wednesday on the front page of Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper.

His assertion was in keeping with a tone set by the Soviet press in other comments and interviews noting the 30th anniversary of Japan's capitulation, which was officially marked Tuesday. Historians and retired general officers have been called forward to buttress the contention that the Soviet invasion of Manchuria led directly to the surrender of Japan.

Some American diplomats here have expressed surprise at the assertion, since the Soviet Union entered the war against Japan Aug. 8, 1945, two days after the atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima. Tokyo called for a cessation of hostilities Aug. 14, though the unconditional surrender was formally signed Sept. 2. Press comments here have given the Soviet participation as lasting 24 days.

The campaign also has been used to remind the Peking regime that it owed its early successes to the aid rendered by the Soviet Union. The Writers Union weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta recently complained that the Chinese were belittling the Soviet army's wartime role in Asia and contended that "from the very first days of the Japanese invasion, the Chinese people received all-around assistance from the U.S.S.R., including military aid."

"Militaristic Japan was forced to agree to unconditional surrender only after the Soviet army routed the aggressor's main strike force — the Kwangtung army," the weekly declared. The Soviet Union bases its claim to playing the leading role in defeating Japan on the fact that the Red Army overran the Japanese army in Manchuria.

There have been isolated instances of disparaging the American role in the Asian war. The retired wartime commander of the Soviet air force, Marshal Aleksandr A. Novikov, asserted in a recent interview circulated by Tass, the Soviet press agency, that "the atomic bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki was unjustified from the military point of view." Novikov was quoted as saying that Japan's defeat was "predetermined by the entire course of the Second World War and the U.S.S.R.'s entry into the war."

A New Police Chief

The complex selection process initiated by former Mayor Schwartzkopf and modified by Mayor Boosalis was designed to boil down the long list of applicants for the job of Lincoln police chief and produce a shorter select list of top quality contenders.

From that process, which as we understand it extensively measured the abilities and records of the applicants, came the name of Sunnyvale, Calif. Public Safety Chief George K. Hansen.

Mrs. Boosalis Wednesday appointed Hansen, a native Nebraskan, as Lincoln police chief effective the end of the month.

Hansen was recommended as the top applicant by the second and final advisory panel named by the mayor after the top six candidates were interviewed last week. According to selection committee member and City Councilman Bob Jeambey, the panel "enthusiastically and unanimously" picked Hansen as the Number One candidate to succeed retired Police Chief Joe Carroll on a permanent basis.

The mayor indicated that Hansen was "hands down" the top choice based on his record, experience and interviews.

It is probable that Hansen and Mrs. Boosalis are philosophically attuned so far as law enforcement is concerned and that bodes well for Lincoln. There is no reason to fear that the basic soundness of the Lincoln Police Department will suffer under new leadership and there are many reasons to believe it will become a better department with an infusion of new blood.

Mrs. Boosalis is to be commended for taking her time in allowing the selection process to run its course.

There was pressure put upon her to make a quick decision. That would have been a disservice to the community.

In making what could be one of the most important decisions of her tenure as mayor (she has said it may become the most important), Mrs. Boosalis and the selection committees took all serious applicants into serious consideration. The mayor listened to all segments of the community.

We think hers was an intelligent, well-reasoned decision.

It appears to be an appointment which the City Council should also enthusiastically confirm.

Some opposition to the mayor's choice has predictably surfaced. It will be interesting to see if that opposition is as reasonably based as the committee's recommendation and the mayor's appointment appear to be.

Identifying The Prey

Dove season opened Monday for the first time in years in Nebraska and amidst an ongoing controversy about whether the dove is a songbird or a gamebird.

Apparently some of the hunters who have taken to the field in search of the allegedly elusive bird are new to the sport.

We're told that there is a real identification problem — that is to say that some hunters apparently are not sure what a dove looks like. And this will add fuel to the fire. Kingbirds, blackbirds, meadowlarks and so forth are being mistaken for doves and therefore are in very big trouble. Some are being "harvested" along with the doves.

A few words about the dove: When sitting, it is upright, unlike many birds. In flight, which is really the only time hunters should be interested in it, the dove's wings produce a very distinctive whistle. The bird is gray-appearing in flight, has a long, pointed tail, a stubby body, short wings and a small head.

Hopefully hunters will take time to acquaint themselves with their prey.

Leave the kingbirds, meadowlarks, et al. alone. There's no season on them.

A Tale Of Two Planets

BALTIMORE — An eerie week. Daytime I'd go to Washington, sit in the marble and listen to people with federal-prose faces talk cosmic. A few billion dollars here, a billion there, war, peace, Kissinger, Gross National Product, double-digit inflation, presidential politics, future of America.

Nights I'd sit on the sidewalk in South Baltimore on another planet watching the cops circling in helicopters, hunting who knows what, listen to people with hard lives rage against welfare.

Daytime, back in Washington, vital billion-dollar-thinkers worried about the state of the country over luncheon beef. Yes, there were bad omens. Too much cynicism about government in the country. Something had to be done, people had to have their faith in American institutions restored. Critical times for America, great decisions pending. People had to et cetera et cetera et cetera.

In South Baltimore at night, sitting on the sidewalk with a woman who runs a neighborhood political club, questions arise. Has she lost faith in American institutions? Her look is articulate. It says, "Are you speaking English?"

The cops swoop overhead in their helicopter. It has a spotlight. They do a lot of shooting in the neighborhood, she says. This sidewalk we're sitting on right here, they shot a guy here a few months ago, and it was the wrong guy, some harmless gawker, hurt bad, but they got the right guy. Anyhow. He never went to jail.

In Washington, everybody said things were really dull. They'd never seen such dullness. Newsweek had done a special story on the dullness. So had The New York Times. Absolutely right, too. Of course, there was Henry in the Middle East. Always good for a little theater, Henry, but there was no getting around the underlying dullness. The country had to get to grips with the great issues.

In South Baltimore we ate spaghetti and sat on the sidewalk sweating into the dusk. Some black kids were riding their bikes the wrong way up a busy one-way street and the Orioles were losing a close one to Chicago on the radio in a room down the block. Fat women sat on stone steps airing themselves in bus exhaust fumes. Five black kids age 9, 10, 11, came down the block carrying sticks and turned the corner.

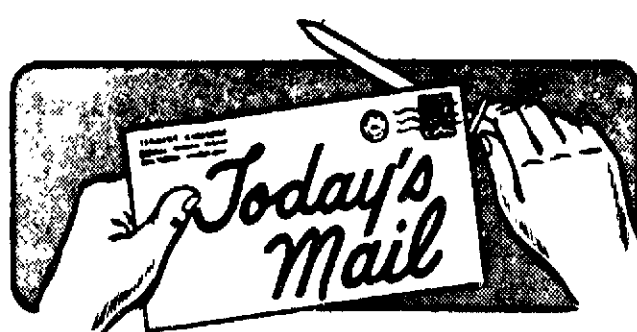

"Looking for trouble," said a white woman, but they weren't. It was dull that night, really dull.

In the Washington daytime, vital men

Future of America and all that — that's the Washington game. South Baltimore's is the present. Tough buns, folks.

Hopes For Change In Law

On Labor Day the first thing we heard was shooting of the innocent little turtle-doves. I think the legislators could have taken time for much better things than making it legal to shoot the doves.

It is heart-breaking to shoot the birds when they are getting so scarce. When one drives in the country now, one doesn't ever see many birds anymore, and they are so valuable to eat all insects and worms that cause so much trouble for the farmers that they have to use spray on their crops.

But it looks as if there isn't any decency anymore. Since the hunters have so many other things they can shoot, I hope they will change the law again soon.

BIRD-LOVER

We Have A State Insect

I wonder how many doves were killed and crippled after the Labor Day fusillade by target-happy gun-toters who call themselves sportsmen.

Thanks to the Game Commission and the one-horse Legislature, we may soon have a "silent fall" as well as Rachel Carson's "The Silent Spring."

This was surely the lowest, most disgraceful piece of legislation ever passed in Nebraska. And yet they thought they had to name a state bird, a state flower and a state insect.

We don't need a state insect — we have the one and only Unicameral. No one else ever seemed to want one. Maybe they didn't like what they saw.

DAMNED MAD

Proposed New Motto

I hope the legislators who voted for the dove-slaughter bill were real happy on September 1. We out in the country were very sad when we heard shots coming from every direction, thinking how many of these lovely innocent creatures were lying perhaps with a broken wing or leg in the 100-degree temperature, unable to get a drink of water.

Why did they have to pass such a senseless law when there were so many opposed to it? Could it be that money talks? They could have passed the bottle bill and brought some relief to the taxpayer and cleaned up our roadsides which are a disgrace to our good state of Nebraska, but they do nothing about that. Perhaps there again, money talks.

The Harmless Dove

Well, dove-hunting season is open and I hope those people up at the Capitol are happy, promoting this stupidity.

Perhaps we should put up "No Hunting" and "No Trespassing" signs along the city streets, too, as there are a lot of doves residing in the towns and cities. The country boys might come to the cities to hunt doves.

I don't think they should hunt doves, harmless little songbirds. There is nothing on them. And the dove has long been a symbol of love and peace.

It is a disgrace and shame to shoot a dove that bothers no one and eats wild seeds.

Fertilizer has leaped from $14 a ton not too long ago, to over $250 a ton today. Could this be due to sales of our fertilizer to Russia and Saudi Arabia and other countries?

RJB Sales, Inc. of Sequim, Washington, has a $1.2 billion deal with Saudi Arabia to ship them liquid manure. Occidental Chemical Corp. of Houston, Texas, and owner of the Florida phosphate mine has recently signed a 20-year contract with Russia to supply one million tons of super-phosphate a year for 20 years. Phosphate mines in the world are so small and few, they will give out in less than 50 years at current rates of use.

Now to top off the fertilizer deal, Russia is buying millions of tons of wheat from America, Canada and Australia. It's probably another one of those lend-lease deals where American taxpayers foot the bill.

Is Russia trying to control the world's food supply? Perhaps she trades wheat for oil and arms materials from other countries.

It's the same old story again this year. Grain companies are getting rich — foreign ships do the hauling — farmers are selling their grain — while the laboring class pays the bill in higher prices and more taxes.

One Vote To Each

I must take issue with a letter from Dan Nolte which appeared in The Star. Unless I am mistaken, the Democratic convention is still a year away and no candidate has yet to "win" anything. Hence, any claims of Jimmy Carter's winning something are a bit premature.

I found even more erroneous Mr. Nolte's claim that only Carter knew the problems of the farmer and the small businessman. Fred Harris spent most of his childhood on his father's ranch in Oklahoma and in later years worked as a field hand in the wheat-harvesting season, following the crop through Nebraska, South Dakota and North Dakota. In this manner, Fred Harris has come to know the problems faced by farmers and average working men far better than Jimmy Carter could ever pretend to.

Fred Harris will soon raise the $5,000 for matching funds, too, but when he does, it will come from thousands of small contributors rather than a few wealthy and "influential" ones. That's the beauty of the new federal financing law — no matter how wealthy some people are, their influence has been cut back to the one vote it should always have been.

Thanks To The Firemen

On behalf of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, I would like to commend the members of the Lincoln Fire Department for their excellent work in controlling the losses due to two recent fires on our East Campus. Their quick response to the alarms and their efforts and competence limited the physical destruction of property to the attic of the Plant Industry Building and to one room in the Biochemistry and Nutrition Building.

The faculty and staff of the Plant Industry Building were especially appreciative of the fireman who first covered the books and equipment on the first three floors to reduce water damage. They were also impressed with the friendly and courteous attitude of the firemen.

Man On The Go

WASHINGTON — Almost everybody seems to have a complaint about American foreign policy these days — often with good reason — but the critics have a problem. For no nation in the world, despite Vietnam, has been more generous or imaginative in trying to deal with the intractable problems of the world, than the United States, and the Ford administration's critics have so far put up no better alternative.

Kissinger's latest effort to buy peace in the Middle East and his appeals at the United Nations for the poor and hungry nations are only the latest symbols of Washington's yearning for a new world order.

Like all his predecessors in the State Department since the last world war, Kissinger has been searching and reaching for compromises between the political realities on Capitol Hill and the political imperatives in other countries.

Cordell Hull tried to ease the conflict between nations with his mutual trade concessions. Gen. George Marshall tried to rescue Western Civilization with the European Recovery Plan. Dean Acheson worked with Lord Keynes for a new world monetary order at Bretton Woods, and with David Lilienthal and Bernard Baruch for the control of atomic energy at a time when they saw the dangers of atomic war.

Often they were too sudden, too idealistic, too dominant and presumptuous, but in these last 30 years, one thing has been fairly clear: America tried in those days more than anybody else to perpetuate in the United Nations the ideal she rejected in League of Nations.

Kissinger has been attacked as a "big power" man, obviously more interested in Washington's relations with Moscow and Peking than with the United Nations in New York, and with his personal relations with Sadat in Cairo and Rabin in Jerusalem, but back of all his shuffles and tactics with the political big boys and the press, he is still reaching and maneuvering for the old ideal.

Year before last, he proclaimed "The Year of Europe," and appealed to the NATO allies to cooperate in dealing with the political and economic problems of the world. At that time, he thought of this as an offer of a new Marshall Plan to Europe.

Later, he suggested that the industrial powers combine to deal with the energy crisis, and offered an American plan to share energy and American technology to create new sources of atomic and solar power.

This week, at the United Nations, Kissinger has been appealing to the developing nations for a new partnership with the industrial nations.

"Let us get down to business," Kissinger said. "Let us put aside the sterile debate over whether a new economic order is required or whether the old economic order is adequate. Let us look forward and shape the world before us. Change is inherent in what we do and what we seek. But one fact does not change: That without a consensus on the realities and principles of the development effort, we will achieve nothing."

Kissinger is in trouble in Washington, not only with the Congress but with his own conservative colleagues in the Ford cabinet, who think he is too sympathetic to the appeals of the developing nations for "a new economic order" and a redistribution of the wealth of the world.

He has paid more attention to the conflicts of the Israelis and the Arabs in the last year than he has to the larger problems between the rich and poor nations of the world, or even between the problems of the rich and poor and the unemployed in the United States, but he has stuck to what he regards as the greatest potential problem of war in the world in the Middle East, despite the objections of Congress.

In the end, he will probably win on Capitol Hill because he is almost the only man in Washington who has a clear vision of what he wants. He wants an interim agreement between Egypt and Israel. He wants time. He believes that, as long as his friend, President Sadat of Egypt, endures, there is just a chance that Sadat will reconcile the Arab nations into accepting a peaceful and permanent relationship with Israel.

It is quite a gamble. Kissinger is betting everything on Sadat, and on his own promises to try to deliver almost $3 billion of aid to Israel, and put American technical observers along the communications lines in the Sinai, but the gamble will probably pay off, for despite all the criticism of Kissinger's tactics and policies, nobody in Washington seems to have a better alternative.

Kissinger could easily be destroyed in these conflicts between Sadat in Egypt, Rabin in Israel and the other Arab states who have not been parties to the Middle-Eastern interim agreement. He could also be cut up in a divided Congress at the beginning of what promises to be a savage presidential campaign, but his consolation is that he feels he is in tune with the American effort of the last generation to find a better alliance in the West, a better understanding with the communist powers, and a new relationship with the poor nations of the world.

He may not make it, but he has defined the problems of the age, probably better than anybody else, and in the process, he has been faithful to the central American policy of reconciliation in the world since the last world war.

Patchwork Prairie Country

Early this morning I heard the distant rumble of thunder. Maybe, just maybe there was a faint hope of rain in our area. It was a good feeling to think the heat wave may be broken before the sky lighted up in the East, so I took another few winks of sleep.

I awakened to a cloudy, cool morning. The rain only settled the dust and washed the grime from the foliage of trees and bushes. Though it did little to the parched ground, it did give the area a fresh look with a clean air scent to match. That can be a reward in midsummer.

Perhaps the rain is being conserved for the State Fair. There is nothing the farmers would like so much as to shut off their irrigation wells and take the day off — relax on the fairgrounds. A rain would be very welcome for dry-land farmers especially as it could add a few extra bushels of grain to their harvest. In fact, a good general rain would add much to the tone of the fair . . . a happy, carefree atmosphere with all the farmers in a jovial mood doing the "bunny hop" or highland fling through the fairgrounds.

Transplanting iris has been squeezed into every spare minute I have. My plans and schedule for this task are a bit behind schedule. Last year was the year for this project.

When the iris bloomed this spring, their blossoms clearly indicated they had to be divided and reset. The flowers were few with some smaller in size. I was surprised to see how large the underground clumps had grown.

It is an exciting time now that the schools have opened for another year. Kindergartners are wide-eyed with new experiences open to them. Little girls bob along the streets to our school in town while little boys loiter. There are so many distractions for little boys . . . so many things to pick up and put in the pocket.

When the buses unload, the entire area is filled with conversation and laughter. Books under the arm, sweaters slung over shoulder and song in the heart characterize our youth. Despite their oft-repeated phrase, "I hate school," I think children would be very lonely without the excitement of making new friends, going out for football practice, planning the pep club schedule and beginning a new class with a new teacher.

Pictureque Portraits I would like to frame for the keeping: Fire-flies flashing sparks of light in the thick darkness of a hot summer night.

Wild grape vines on an old bridge printing the sky with purple clusters and reaching tendrils.

Rain clouds scowling along the western horizon at nightfall, promising a break in the drought before morning.

The fields in the bottoms now yellow with brown-eyed Susans.

Misty blue haze of autumn hovering over the swamp as the land seems settling to its rest.

The calm simplicity of grace in the wrinkled face of someone's grandmother as she rocks a new grandchild to sleep.

Iced lemonade and slim silver spoons in frosty glasses.

Squealing children riding the horses on a merry-go-round prancing and bounding on their favorite steed.

A freezer of homemade ice-cream, rich and creamy, ready for the testing.

A little boy with a licorice whip with as much black goodness on the outside of his mouth as on the inside.

The profile of a windmill boldly etched across the sunset sky.

Ears of golden corn popping through their green coats as the maturity of autumn approaches.

Farmers driving slowly by their fields, anticipating their harvest, feeling deep satisfaction as another growing season comes to a close.

A New Police Chief

The complex selection process initiated by former Mayor Schwartzkopf and modified by Mayor Boosalis was designed to boil down the long list of applicants for the job of Lincoln police chief and produce a shorter select list of top quality contenders.

From that process, which as we understand it extensively measured the abilities and records of the applicants, came the name of Sunnyvale, Calif. Public Safety Chief George K. Hansen.

Mrs. Boosalis Wednesday appointed Hansen, a native Nebraskan, as Lincoln police chief effective the end of the month.

Hansen was recommended as the top applicant by the second and final advisory panel named by the mayor after the top six candidates were interviewed last week. According to selection committee member and City Councilman Bob Jeambey, the panel "enthusiastically and unanimously" picked Hansen as the Number One candidate to succeed retired Police Chief Joe Carroll on a permanent basis.

The mayor indicated that Hansen was "hands down" the top choice based on his record, experience and interviews.

It is probable that Hansen and Mrs. Boosalis are philosophically attuned so far as law enforcement is concerned and that bodes well for Lincoln. There is no reason to fear that the basic soundness of the Lincoln Police Department will suffer under new leadership and there are many reasons to believe it will become a better department with an infusion of new blood.

Mrs. Boosalis is to be commended for taking her time in allowing the selection process to run its course.

There was pressure put upon her to make a quick decision. That would have been a disservice to the community.

In making what could be one of the most important decisions of her tenure as mayor (she has said it may become the most important), Mrs. Boosalis and the selection committees took all serious applicants into serious consideration. The mayor listened to all segments of the community.

We think hers was an intelligent, well-reasoned decision.

It appears to be an appointment which the City Council should also enthusiastically confirm.

Some opposition to the mayor's choice has predictably surfaced. It will be interesting to see if that opposition is as reasonably based as the committee's recommendation and the mayor's appointment appear to be.

Identifying The Prey

Dove season opened Monday for the first time in years in Nebraska and amidst an ongoing controversy about whether the dove is a songbird or a gamebird.

Apparently some of the hunters who have taken to the field in search of the allegedly elusive bird are new to the sport.

We're told that there is a real identification problem — that is to say that some hunters apparently are not sure what a dove looks like. And this will add fuel to the fire. Kingbirds, blackbirds, meadowlarks and so forth are being mistaken for doves and therefore are in very big trouble. Some are being "harvested" along with the doves.

A few words about the dove: When sitting, it is upright, unlike many birds. In flight, which is really the only time hunters should be interested in it, the dove's wings produce a very distinctive whistle. The bird is gray-appearing in flight, has a long, pointed tail, a stubby body, short wings and a small head.

Hopefully hunters will take time to acquaint themselves with their prey.

Leave the kingbirds, meadowlarks, et al, alone. There's no season on them.

A Tale Of Two Planets

BALTIMORE — An eerie week. Daytimes I'd go to Washington, sit in the marble and listen to people with federal-prose faces talk cosmic. A few billion dollars here, a billion there, war, peace, Kissinger, Gross National Product, double-digit inflation, presidential politics, future of America.

Nights I'd sit on the sidewalk in South Baltimore on another planet watching the cops circling in helicopters, hunting who knows what, listen to people with hard lives rage against welfare.

Daytime, back in Washington, vital billion-dollar-thinkers worried about the state of the country over luncheon beef. Yes, there were bad omens. Too much cynicism about government in the country. Something had to be done, people had to have their faith in American institutions restored. Critical times for America, great decisions pending. People had to et cetera et cetera et cetera.

In South Baltimore at night, sitting on the sidewalk with a woman who runs a neighborhood political club, questions arise. Has she lost faith in American institutions? Her look is articulate. It says, "Are you speaking English?"

In Washington, everybody said things were really dull. They'd never seen such dullness. Newsweek had done a special story on the dullness. So had The New York Times. Absolutely right, too. Of course, there was Henry in the Middle East. Always good for a little theater, Henry, but there was no getting around the underlying dullness. The country had to get to grips with the great issues.

In South Baltimore we ate spaghetti and sat on the sidewalk sweating into the dusk. Some black kids were riding their bikes the wrong way up a busy one-way street and the Orioles were losing a close one to Chicago on the radio in a room down the block. Fat women sat on stone steps airing themselves in bus exhaust fumes. Five black kids age 9, 10, 11, came down the block carrying sticks and turned the corner.

"Looking for trouble," said a white woman, but they weren't. It was dull that night, really dull.

Hopes For Change In Law

On Labor Day the first thing we heard was shooting of the innocent little turtle-doves. I think the legislators could have taken time for much better things than making it legal to shoot the doves.

It is heart-breaking to shoot the birds when they are getting so scarce. When one drives in the country now, one doesn't ever see many birds anymore, and they are so valuable to eat all insects and worms that cause so much trouble for the farmers that they have to use spray on their crops.

But it looks as if there isn't any decency anymore. Since the hunters have so many other things they can shoot, I hope they will change the law again soon.

I wonder how many doves were killed and crippled after the Labor Day fusillade by target-happy gun-toters who call themselves sportsmen.

Thanks to the Game Commission and the one-horse Legislature, we may soon have a "silent fall" as well as Rachel Carson's "The Silent Spring."

This was surely the lowest, most disgraceful piece of legislation ever passed in Nebraska. And yet they thought they had to name a state bird, a state flower and a state insect.

We don't need a state insect — we have the one and only Unicameral. No one else ever seemed to want one. Maybe they didn't like what they saw.

ABP's West Pleads Innocent To All Charges

Omaha (AP) — Frank R. West, president, board chairman and founder of bankrupt American Beef Packers, Inc. (ABP), appeared in U.S. District Court here Wednesday, entering innocent pleas to federal allegations that he conspired to defraud Midwestern livestock feeders out of more than $2 million dollars.

The charges are contained in a 105-count indictment returned last month by a federal grand jury which met here.

Also named in the indictment were West's most trusted lieutenant, Robert E. Lee, ABP's vice president of livestock procurement, along with American Beef as a corporation and its wholly owned subsidiary, Beefland International, Inc., Council Bluffs, Iowa.

All Plead Not Guilty

Lee appeared with West, as did attorneys for the two corporations, all entering not guilty pleas to the charges.

West and Donald E. Carlson, ABP's Omaha plant manager, are also named in a separate indictment charging them with bribing federal meat graders working in ABP and Beefland plants.

Both men entered innocent pleas to those charges.

Carlson is also charged with perjury in connection with his testimony before a grand jury probing the alleged bribery, and has pleaded innocent to that charge as well.

No Bonds Required

Judge Robert V. Denney did not set bond for any of the defendants, saying they will remain free on their own recognizance because they have shown up in court when ordered to on previous occasions.

All of the pleas entered Wednesday are conditioned on the outcome motions, which Denney ordered filed within 10 days.

West's attorney, Arthur O'Leary, said he "definitely" intends to file motions to quash the indictments, but did not say on what grounds he will base his arguments.

Denney wanted to set trial on the bribery charges later this month, but government attorneys asked the judge to wait until Carlson's trial on the perjury charges has been completed.

The perjury trial, which is expected to take several days, was slated to begin Sept. 15, but at the request of O'Leary, and over the objections of the government, Denney moved it back to Sept. 29. No date was set for trial on the bribery or conspiracy charges. Government attorneys expect the bribery trial to last about a week. Denney said he could see a three-to-four week trial on the conspiracy charges.

The federal conspiracy indictment charges West, Lee and the two corporations with scheming to defraud livestock feeders by purchasing livestock with rubber checks which were drawn on distant banks. The conspiracy, according to the indictment, culminated with ABP's Chapter 11 bankruptcy filing last Jan. 7.

West and Lee face similar charges filed by the state of Iowa, and West, along with several former and current ABP officers and employees, also face a string of charges filed by South Dakota officials. West has pleaded innocent to all charges filed against him.

Omaha (AP) — Victor Royal, 26, of Omaha, who was wanted by police, was shot to death Tuesday night.

Sgt. Robert Iltzsch said Royal was dead on arrival at a hospital after suffering two gunshot wounds to the stomach.

A 17-year-old woman was arrested at her home where the shooting occurred, police said. Cruiser car officers quoted her as saying she shot Royal to prevent being raped.

After questioning the woman at length, Deputy County Atty. Jerry Kinney said the woman apparently shot Royal in self defense, and that no charges would be filed in the case.

Reports showed that Royal was arrested in July in connection with the robbery of the Omaha Savings and Loan office.

He was released on $7,500 bail, but police said a warrant was issued for his arrest when he failed to make a court appearance in connection with the case.

Two more names were added to Nebraska's 1975 highway death toll Wednesday, raising the count to 237, compared with 268 on this date last year.

A 69-year-old New York man was killed Wednesday morning when his car collided with a gravel-sand truck on Highway 30, just east of Grand Island.

The identity of the fatality was being withheld pending notification of relatives.

Authorities said the truck driver, Jimmy Bell, 25, of Grand Island, was treated for minor injuries at a local hospital, and was then released.

Meanwhile, the State Accident Records Bureau issued a delayed report on the death of a Plattsmouth woman.

Officials said Shirley J. Schwantes, 42, died Aug. 24, of injuries she suffered when two motorcycles collided in Plattsmouth two days earlier.

Investigators said Mrs. Schwantes was a passenger on a cycle operated by her 38-year-old husband, James. The Schwantes cycle stuck a bike operated by Marvin Axt, 45, also Plattsmouth. The accident occurred at a Plattsmouth intersection as Schwantes was attempting a turn.

Woman Injured In Bike Crash

A 20-year-old Lincoln woman suffered a broken leg Wednesday night when her bicycle collided with a car at 27th and E Sts., police said.

Anne H. Cockson of 1630 G St. was listed in satisfactory condition at Bryan Memorial Hospital.

Police said Cockson collided with a car southbound on 27th, turning left onto E St. The car was driven by Dave L. Schwartz, 22, of 910 E St., police said.

G.I. School Enrollment Sets Record

Grand Island (AP) — Enrollment in Grand Island's public schools this year is the highest ever, according to Supt. Dr. Clifford Dale. Dale said 6,744 students attended classes Tuesday, the district's first day of the 1975-76 school year. The figure is about 200 students higher than previous years, Dale said. He explained most of the 7% increase over last year can be attributed to the closing of two Catholic grade schools in the city, but he added that some of the increase can be traced to the city's growth in the past year.

Lightning Blamed For Wayne Blaze

Wayne (UPI) — The state fire marshal's office has tentatively ruled that the cause of the blaze which destroyed the Wayne rendering plant last week was lightning. The report from the fire marshal's office said there were some shorts found in electrical wiring, but that lightning was probably the actual cause of the fire. Damages were estimated at $100,000. New Gun Dealer Ordinance Passed Omaha (AP) — The City Council has passed an ordinance requiring second-hand gun dealers to report all transactions to police. The Police Department hopes that the ordinance, effective Sept. 17, will make it tougher for burglars to sell stolen guns. Firearms dealers will have to mail a report of sales and purchases to the Police Department at the end of each business day. All guns purchased must be held by a dealer for at least 10 days.

ABP's West Pleads Innocent To All Charges

Omaha (AP) — Frank R. West, president, board chairman and founder of bankrupt American Beef Packers, Inc. (ABP), appeared in U.S. District Court here Wednesday, entering innocent pleas to federal allegations that he conspired to defraud Midwestern livestock feeders out of more than $2 million dollars.

The charges are contained in a 105-count indictment returned last month by a federal grand jury which met here.

Also named in the indictment were West's most trusted lieutenant, Robert E. Lee, ABP's vice president of livestock procurement, along with American Beef as a corporation and its wholly owned subsidiary, Beefland International, Inc., Council Bluffs, Iowa.

All Plead Not Guilty

Lee appeared with West, as did attorneys for the two corporations, all entering not guilty pleas to the charges.

West and Donald E. Carlson, ABP's Omaha plant manager, are also named in a separate indictment charging them with bribing federal meat graders working in ABP and Beefland plants.

Both men entered innocent pleas to those charges.

Carlson is also charged with perjury in connection with his testimony before a grand jury probing the alleged bribery, and has pleaded innocent to that charge as well.

No Bonds Required

Judge Robert V. Denney did not set bond for any of the defendants, saying they will remain free on their own recognizance because they have shown up in court when ordered to on previous occasions.

All of the pleas entered Wednesday are conditioned on the outcome motions, which Denney ordered filed within 10 days.

West's attorney, Arthur O'Leary, said he "definitely" intends to file motions to quash the indictments, but did not say on what grounds he will base his arguments.

Denney wanted to set trial on the bribery charges later this month, but government attorneys asked the judge to wait until Carlson's trial on the perjury charges has been completed.

The perjury trial, which is expected to take several days, was slated to begin Sept. 15, but at the request of O'Leary, and over the objections of the government, Denney moved it back to Sept. 29. No date was set for trial on the bribery or conspiracy charges.

Government attorneys expect the bribery trial to last about a week. Denney said he could see a three-to-four week trial on the conspiracy charges.

The federal conspiracy indictment charges West, Lee and the two corporations with scheming to defraud livestock feeders by purchasing livestock with rubber checks which were drawn on distant banks. The conspiracy, according to the indictment, culminated with ABP's Chapter 11 bankruptcy filing last Jan. 7.

West and Lee face similar charges filed by the state of Iowa, and West, along with several former and current ABP officers and employees, also face a string of charges filed by South Dakota officials. West has pleaded innocent to all charges filed against him.

Blind Graduate Student Tries To Retain Identity

By TOM COOK
Outstate Nebraska Bureau
Schuyler — This won't be a token story about the blind kid that made good because George Stoltenberg wouldn't want it that way.
Being blind can be a real nuisance sometimes, says Stoltenberg, 23.
"You start to mistrust people," he said. "Blindness screws up a person's perceptions — not just the blind person's, but also those around him."

Stoltenberg has become an accomplished guitarist since he went blind and has played in rock 'n' roll and folk music groups in his undergraduate days at Midland College in Fremont. He is not studying for a Ph.D. in psychology at Indiana University under a prestigious postgraduate scholarship from the Danforth Foundation.

Nothing Special
He doesn't see anything special or unusual in these accomplishments, except that they fulfill sighted society's stereotype of how a blind person can get along.

"The one stereotype you don't want to appeal to is being a musician," he said. "It's like a black being told he has natural rhythm."

When he was five years old, Stoltenberg lost sight in one eye because of a detached retina. In May 1965 the same malady left him blind at age 13.

He left Schuyler, where his parents own a heating and sheet metal store, to attend the Nebraska School for the Visually Handicapped in Nebraska City. There, he says he was forced by fear to reassess his young life.

"I'd always intended to get into the Army or be a grease monkey or something," he said. "I decided I couldn't use my hands, so I'd have to use my head, which was a new experience."

STOLTENBERG... finds being blind can be a real nuisance.

Stoltenberg says he quickly caught on to the academic game and poured all of his efforts into it. "I started out to be Mr. Super Blind," he said. "I may have pushed myself too far. You miss a lot of other things about life."

Blind people are forced into a boom-or-bust way of life, he says, and little attention is paid to the vast majority who are left in the middle. "There is too much temptation to lay out and collect a supplemental Social Security check," he said. "A lot of impetus for succeeding is taken away. Sometimes you kind of think that's what society would want you to do."

Stoltenberg played baseball, hunted and fished before he lost his vision. He took up wrestling in high school and, when he has time, he still lifts weights and goes for walks to stay in shape. However, in his quest to prove himself in the sighted world, constant studying has left him less and less free time.

"I'd had 13 years in a sighted world. It was a struggle to regain an identity that I thought worthy to be looked on by others as an equal," he said.

For every one of the sighted world's barriers he clears, another one seems to be thrown up.

After adjusting to the academic world, Stoltenberg hopes to receive his degree in clinical psychology by May 1977.

His textbooks come from a nonprofit agency called Records for the Blind. He takes most of his tests orally and hires readers to help him with library research from funds granted him by Nebraska's Rehabilitation for the Visually Impaired Program.

Now says Stoltenberg, people in his chosen profession aren't sure he can be an effective clinical psychologist.

Interpreting the Rorschach Test, which is used in analyzing personality from a patient's interpretation of ink-blot patterns, is one area of concern. "One of the things I could do is memorize all the possible things a patient may see in them," he said.

Stoltenberg thinks blind people are able and have the right to succeed or fail on equal terms with sighted people.

Stigmatized Group
"I still believe most of a blind person's problem is that he's part of a stigmatized group," he said. "Blind people need to organize around themselves and exert pressure to bring legislation and to mold public opinion."

Confidence is the most important thing a blind person can have, Stoltenberg says, and he credits Lutheran Pastor Bruce Berggren for teaching him that lesson.

"For some reason he took a special interest in me," said Stoltenberg. "He didn't talk about my problems. He emphasized my good points."

Stoltenberg had this parting advice: "Don't give this article to anyone who is blind as an example of someone who has made it. It's a real pain to have an external influence forced upon you directing you."

Widow's Home Off Condemnation List

Omaha (AP) — A little house on a hill in south Omaha that was condemned by city hall won a reprieve Tuesday from the City Council.

The condemnation appeal of Mrs. Melba Callow had been postponed 10 times by the council. She repeatedly asked for more time and said she would fix up the house.

"It's going to be a long haul," said her attorney, Vard Johnson, director of the Legal Aid Society. "But, by golly, we're going to do it."

Mrs. Callow, a widow, lives across the street from a vacant house.

Johnson said they promised to show progress every time they came back, and "it's painted on three sides now. And, the next time we're here, it will be painted on the fourth side."

Mrs. Callow hopes to pay $500 in back taxes on the home this winter, and Johnson said the restoration will be slow. "But the house is going to live again."

The council removed the house from the condemnation list.

Omaha May End Stickers

Omaha (AP) — The city of Omaha will have a wheel tax, but maybe not a wheel tax sticker next year.

Mayor Edward Zorinsky said it has not been decided for certain, but windshield stickers may not be used.

The reason, officials said, is a new state law on auto registrations. Starting next year, registration will be good for a year from the date of registration, and not necessarily renewal by March 1 each year.

City Finance Director George Richardson said license plates will note the month of registration.

It has cost the city about $4,000 a year to have the stickers printed. But, he said, a different sticker for each month next year would be required.

Big Green Lottery Comes One Step Nearer Reality

Omaha (AP) — The city council has removed another barrier for the Big Green Lottery. It is now planned to start the lottery in two weeks.

The council repealed two regulatory ordinances Tuesday it had passed before the District Court ruled the city's involvement in the lottery was illegal.

Attorneys for the city and the City Betterment Corp., promoter of the lottery, had said repeal was necessary to comply with the spirit of the court order.

The ordinances would have required financial reports and a bond from the operator, and set standards regarding who may sell tickets.

Officials said the plan is to write new regulatory ordinances. Big Green officials have said they would comply with any regulations.

Meanwhile, a judge ruled that two attorneys who successfully brought suit to end the city's participation in the proposed lottery are not entitled to compensation for their efforts.

District Court Judge John Murphy said although he was persuaded that attorneys Martin

Cannon and J. Michael Fitzgerald spent at least 80 hours on the suit, "there is no provision for the allowance of any fee in this case."

Cannon said he was disappointed at the judge's ruling. But he added, "I didn't file the suit to collect a fee. I filed it to stop a lottery."

Cannon said he does not plan to appeal Murphy's ruling.

Last month Murphy declared the city's participation in the lottery illegal, partly because he determined that the city was operating in partnership with the City Betterment Corp., and because the city can't operate a lottery without a vote of the people.

Committee Sets Mental Hearings

The Legislature's interim study committee on mental retardation will be holding public hearings in Lincoln, Norfolk and Omaha this month. Sen. Shirley Marsh of Lincoln said Wednesday.

The committee, which is evaluating services provided by community-based programs for the retarded as well as financing, has already held hearings at Scottsbluff, Kearney and North Platte.

The Lincoln hearing will be held at the Capitol Building on Sept. 11 while the Norfolk hearing will be held Sept. 18 at the Northeast Technical Community College. The Omaha hearing will be held Sept. 19 in the Student Union Building on the University of Nebraska-Omaha campus.

Star Of 'Jesus' Marries Dancer

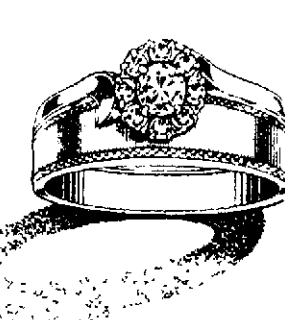

London (UPI) — Actor Robert Powell, 31, recently chosen to play the title role in the television series, "The Life of Jesus," said he has married the girl he was living with, dancer Babs Lord.

He denied the new role for the Associated Television Network had influenced his decision.

Blind Graduate Student Tries To Retain Identity

By TOM COOK
 Outstate Nebraska Bureau
 Schuyler — This won't be a token story about the blind kid that made good because George Stoltenberg wouldn't want it that way.
 Being blind can be a real nuisance sometimes, says Stoltenberg, 23.

Stoltenberg has become an accomplished guitarist since he went blind and has played in rock 'n' roll and folk music groups in his undergraduate days at Midland College in Fremont. He is not studying for a Ph.D. in psychology at Indiana University under a prestigious postgraduate scholarship from the Danforth Foundation.

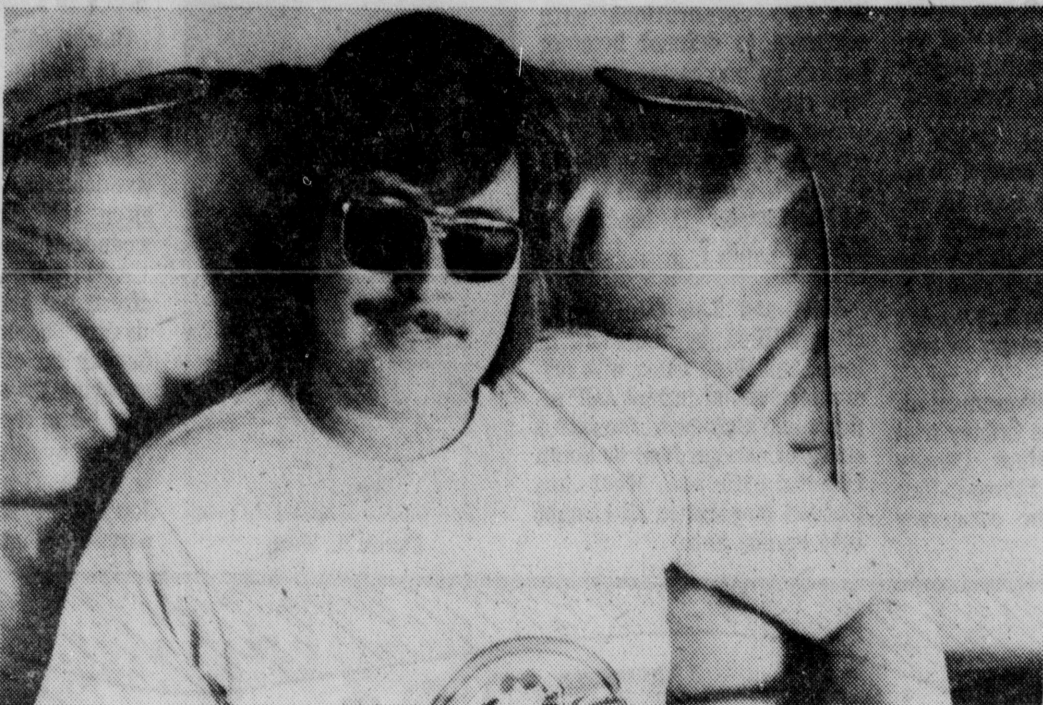

Nothing Special
 He doesn't see anything special or unusual in these accomplishments, except that they fulfill sighted society's stereotype of how a blind person can get along.

When he was five years old, Stoltenberg lost sight in one eye because of a detached retina. In May 1965 the same malady left him blind at age 13.

He left Schuyler, where his parents own a heating and sheet metal store, to attend the Nebraska School for the Visually Handicapped in Nebraska City. There, he says he was forced by fear to reassess his young life.

"I'd always intended to get into the Army or be a grease monkey or something," he said. "I decided I couldn't use my hands, so I'd have to use my head, which was a new experience."

STOLTENBERG... finds being blind can be a real nuisance.

Stoltenberg says he quickly caught on to the academic game and poured all of his efforts into it. "I started out to be Mr. Super Blind," he said. "I may have pushed myself too far. You miss a lot of other things about life."

Blind people are forced into a boom-or-bust way of life, he says, and little attention is paid to the vast majority who are left in the middle.

"There is too much temptation to lay out and collect a supplemental Social Security check," he said. "A lot of impetus for succeeding is taken away. Sometimes you kind of think that's what society would want you to do."

Stoltenberg played baseball, hunted and fished before he lost his vision. He took up wrestling in high school and, when he has time, he still lifts weights and goes for walks to stay in shape. However, in his quest to prove himself in the sighted world, constant studying has left him less and less free time.

"I'd had 13 years in a sighted world. It was a struggle to regain an identity that I thought worthy to be looked on by others as an equal," he said.

For every one of the sighted world's barriers he clears, another one seems to be thrown up.

After adjusting to the academic world, Stoltenberg hopes to receive his degree in clinical psychology by May 1977.

His textbooks come from a nonprofit agency called Records for the Blind. He takes most of his tests orally and hires readers to help him with library research from funds granted him by Nebraska's Rehabilitation for the Visually Impaired Program.

Now says Stoltenberg, people in his chosen profession aren't sure he can be an effective clinical psychologist.

Interpreting the Rorschach Test, which is used in analyzing personality from a patient's interpretation of ink-blot patterns, is one area of concern. "One of the things I could do is memorize all the possible things a patient may see in them," he said.

Stoltenberg thinks blind people are able and have the right to succeed or fail on equal terms with sighted people.

Stigmatized Group
 "I still believe most of a blind person's problem is that he's part of a stigmatized group," he said. "Blind people need to organize around themselves and exert pressure to bring legislation and to mold public opinion."

Confidence is the most important thing a blind person can have, Stoltenberg says, and he credits Lutheran Pastor Bruce Berggren for teaching him that lesson.

"For some reason he took a special interest in me," said Stoltenberg. "He didn't talk about my problems. He emphasized my good points."

Stoltenberg had this parting advice: "Don't give this article to anyone who is blind as an example of someone who has made it. It's a real pain to have an external influence forced upon you directing you."

Widow's Home Off Condemnation List

Omaha (AP) — A little house on a hill in south Omaha that was condemned by city hall won a reprieve Tuesday from the City Council.

The condemnation appeal of Mrs. Melba Callow had been postponed 10 times by the council. She repeatedly asked for more time and said she would fix up the house.

"It's going to be a long haul," said her attorney, Vard Johnson, director of the Legal Aid Society. "But, by golly, we're going to do it."

Mrs. Callow, a widow, lives across the street from a vacant house.

Johnson said they promised to show progress every time they came back, and "it's painted on three sides now. And, the next time we're here, it will be painted on the fourth side."

Mrs. Callow hopes to pay $500 in back taxes on the home this winter, and Johnson said the restoration will be slow. "But the house is going to live again."

The council removed the house from the condemnation list.

Omaha May End Stickers

Omaha (AP) — The city of Omaha will have a wheel tax, but maybe not a wheel tax sticker next year.

Mayor Edward Zorinsky said it has not been decided for certain, but windshield stickers may not be used.

The reason, officials said, is a new state law on auto registrations.

Starting next year, registration will be good for a year from the date of registration, and not necessarily renewal by March 1 each year.

City Finance Director George Richardson said license plates will note the month of registration.

It has cost the city about $4,000 a year to have the stickers printed. But, he said, a different sticker for each month next year would be required.

Big Green Lottery Comes One Step Nearer Reality

Omaha (AP) — The city council has removed another barrier for the Big Green Lottery. It is now planned to start the lottery in two weeks.

The council repealed two regulatory ordinances Tuesday it had passed before the District Court ruled the city's involvement in the lottery was illegal.

Attorneys for the city and the City Betterment Corp., promoter of the lottery, had said repeal was necessary to comply with the spirit of the court order.

The ordinances would have required financial reports and a bond from the operator, and set standards regarding who may sell tickets.

Officials said the plan is to write new regulatory ordinances. Big Green officials have said they would comply with any regulations.

Meanwhile, a judge ruled that two attorneys who successfully brought suit to end the city's participation in the proposed lottery are not entitled to compensation for their efforts.

District Court Judge John Murphy said although he was persuaded that attorneys Martin

Cannon and J. Michael Fitzgerald spent at least 80 hours on the suit, "there is no provision for the allowance of any fee in this case."

Cannon said he was disappointed at the judge's ruling. But he added, "I didn't file the suit to collect a fee. I filed it to stop a lottery."

Cannon said he does not plan to appeal Murphy's ruling.

Last month Murphy declared the city's participation in the lottery illegal, partly because he determined that the city was operating in partnership with the City Betterment Corp., and because the city can't operate a lottery without a vote of the people.

Committee Sets Mental Hearings

The Legislature's interim study committee on mental retardation will be holding public hearings in Lincoln, Norfolk and Omaha this month, Sen. Shirley Marsh of Lincoln said Wednesday.

The committee, which is evaluating services provided by community-based programs for the retarded as well as financing, has already held hearings at Scottsbluff, Kearney and North Platte.

The Lincoln hearing will be held at the Capitol Building on Sept. 11 while the Norfolk hearing will be held Sept. 18 at the Northeast Technical Community College. The Omaha hearing will be held Sept. 19 in the Student Union Building on the University of Nebraska-Omaha campus.

He denied the new role for the Associated Television Network had influenced his decision.

University of Nebraska Regents will be asked Saturday to approve NU general operating budget and capital budget requests for 1976-77.

NU President D.B. Varner in July told regents the university will need a 20% or $15 million increase in its state general fund (tax) share, to about $90 million.

Varner cited "serious fiscal problems" with current funding levels, and said that without the increase, effectiveness of programs will be weakened on the Lincoln, Omaha and Medical Center campuses.

Regents approved guidelines to make 1976-77 budget recommendations, which limit to 20% the increase to be sought above general fund support during the current fiscal year.

No specific figures will be available until late this week, as Varner and top NU officials are still shaping the final recommendations to present to the regents.

The board will meet at 7 a.m. in Regents Hall, 3835 Holdrege. The first two hours are expected to be a closed session. A 9 a.m. public hearing is scheduled on whether regents should lease for $1 space on Ak-Sar-Ben exposition grounds in Omaha for UNO student, faculty and visitor parking.

Budget action will follow in the formal meeting. Regent-okayed guidelines include salary and wage increases of 6% plus additional funds to bring faculty pay to the regional average, and boosted appropriations to cover costs affected by inflation.

However, no new programs may be proposed, and no new "Areas of Excellence" may be identified for special funding.

UNL Chancellor James H. Zumbege will seek approval of pay increases, ranging from $500 to more than $1,000, for faculty promotion and to recognize extraordinary merit during 1975-76.

Acceptance of Zumbege's resignation is also on the agenda. Zumbege is expected to be named president of Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Tex., on Friday.

The regents' attorney will report on pending litigation. Board members directed him earlier to file court action to determine regents' rights and responsibilities, in relation to the Legislature and other state agencies. Regents have complained their constitutional authority to govern NU has been encroached upon.

The board will hear a status report on capital construction projects, and on the petition that NU and educational television production and technical personnel filed with the State Court of Industrial Relations, seeking to unionize.

A total of $3,724,237 in grants and gifts to NU will be proposed for regents' acceptance.

In UNL business affairs, the board will be asked to:

— Ratify an agreement with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra to appear in residence at Kimball Recital Hall on Oct. 31 and Nov. 1-2.

— Approve a room-and-board rate increase at the NU School of Technical Agriculture, Curtis.

— Accept a $48,684 bid by Devac Inc. to replace windows in the Food and Nutrition Building.

— Accept the $36,353 bid by N.D. Judds Co. to renovate the R Street entrance to the Nebraska Union.

— Accept a total of $1,498,463 in bids to build the Veterinary Science Building.

M.W. Anderson Construction Co. is the general contractor.

In UNO business items, Chancellor Ronald Roskens will ask regents to:

— Authorize approval to name the UNO Stadium, in a recommendation he'll disclose Saturday.

— Approve a $50,000 contract between the training and community service department and the State Office of Planning and Programming, to provide work-study experience for women, minority and disadvantaged students. The program would develop managerial abilities and public service opportunities, through work in government planning operations.

Robert D. Sparks, M.D., chancellor of the NU Medical Center in Omaha, will request that regents:

— Okay paying $31,700 to Creighton University to conduct language and cultural orientation in the Vietnamese Physicians Program.

— Authorize their executive committee to accept low bids to build the Ambulatorium, and to take final action after a Sept. 13 hearing in Lincoln.

— Approve the use plan for University Hospital.

— Adopt the doctor of pharmacy degree as the terminal professional degree in the College of Pharmacy, to replace the bachelor of science degree.

— Change the certificate program in nurse anesthesia to a bachelor of science degree program.

Democrat Sees 'Attempt To Evade' Campaign Law

A member of the Democratic state central committee Wednesday accused Republican Sen. Carl Curtis and two Nebraska congressmen of "attempting to evade" the new campaign finance law.

Larry Doyle of Benkleman said a weekend political meeting in Minden which was "intended to further Congressman John McCollister's Senate campaign" should have been reported as a campaign expense under the new law.

"It takes more than a non-partisan disclaimer to make a rally non-partisan," he said.

Curtis, McCollister and Congressman Virginia Smith participated in the meeting, Doyle said.

"It seems the Republican Party bosses are trying to maneuver their way around the law in an effort to insure the election of Sen. Hruska's appointed successor," he said.

Exon Campaign Manager Eyes 1st District Race

The man who managed Gov. J. James Exon's successful campaigns in 1970 and 1974, Loren Belker, is thinking about running for the 1st District Democratic congressional nomination next year.

Belker, a Lincoln insurance executive, said several friends have encouraged him to run.

"I believe I have an obligation to them to seriously consider running," said Belker.

However, Belker, 49, added that he is in no rush to decide, and that he will make a final decision around the first of the year.

Demo Treasurer Kohloff Resigns Nebraska Post

L. Vern Kohloff of Lincoln has resigned as treasurer of the Nebraska Democratic Party organization.

Kohloff has served in that capacity and as party vice chairman. He chaired the inaugural committee last year for Gov. J. James Exon, was a 1972 supporter of Maine Sen. Edmund Muskie's presidential bid, and was a keynote speaker at last year's state party convention.

Democratic State Chairman Dick White reported Kohloff's resignation at a recent meeting of the party's executive committee. White said Kohloff resigned because of personal commitments.

No replacement for Kohloff was announced.

At the same meeting, Pauline Anderson resigned as associate chairman of the Democrats' 1st District congressional caucus.

She has served in the past as coordinator for Darrel E. Berg's unsuccessful 1972 congressional campaign, is a former activist in Americans for Democratic Action, and chaired the committee that arranged the 1973 Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner.

Four Colorado Men Sought

Sidney (AP) — Cheyenne County authorities are looking for four men believed to be from the Sterling, Colo., area, in connection with an incident early Sunday at a residence in Brownson.

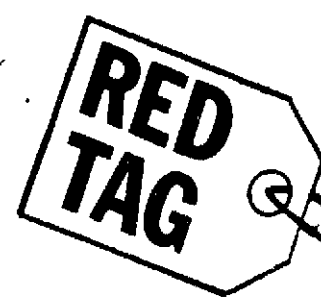

Warrants for the arrest of Chris L. Carpenter, Roger Haller, Mark Sobott and Theodore Sobott, no ages given, have been issued by a Cheyenne County Court judge. Each of the suspects is wanted on three counts of robbery, two counts of felonious assault and one count of malicious destruction of property.

The charges stem from a party in Brownson, in which the suspects allegedly bound and robbed about 20 youthful party-goers.

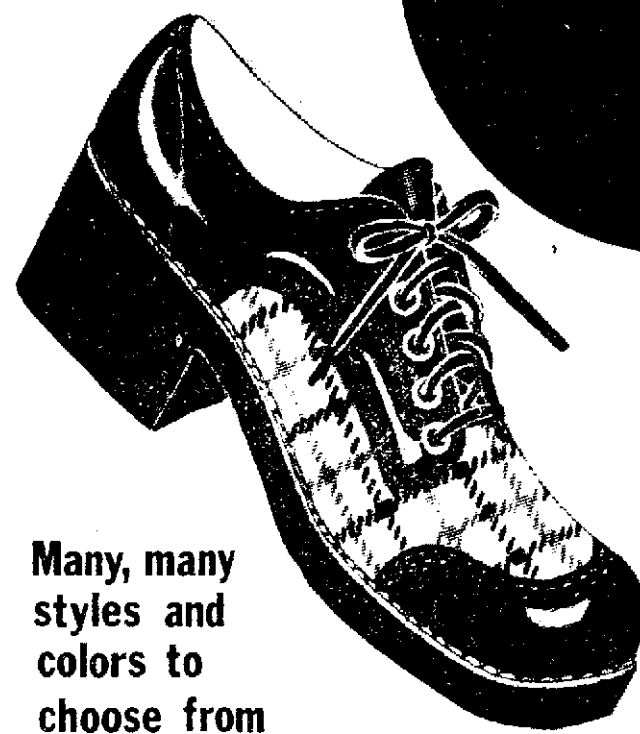

Bikes Free

Tokyo (UPI) — The Japanese Cycle Industry Association is making available free of charge 500 bikes for Sunday cyclists on the newly opened 4.6-mile path around the Imperial Palace in the heart of Tokyo, the Japan National Tourist Organization reported.

Regents To Be Asked To Okay Budgets

Thursday, September 4, 1975 The Lincoln Star 7

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

University of Nebraska Regents will be asked Saturday to approve NU general operating budget and capital budget requests for 1976-77.

NU President D.B. Varner in July told regents the university will need a 20% or $15 million increase in its state general fund (tax) share, to about $90 million.

Varner cited "serious fiscal problems" with current funding levels, and said that without the increase, effectiveness of programs will be weakened on the Lincoln, Omaha and Medical Center campuses.

Democrat Sees 'Attempt To Evade' Campaign Law

A member of the Democratic state central committee Wednesday accused Republican Sen. Carl Curtis and two Nebraska congressmen of "attempting to evade" the new campaign finance law.

Larry Doyle of Benkleman said a weekend political meeting in Minden which was "intended to further Congressman John McCollister's Senate campaign" should have been reported as a campaign expense under the new law.

"It takes more than a non-partisan disclaimer to make a rally non-partisan," he said.

Curtis, McCollister and Congresswoman Virginia Smith participated in the meeting, Doyle said.

"It seems the Republican Party bosses are trying to maneuver their way around the law in an effort to insure the election of Sen. Hruska's appointed successor," he said.

Politicians Visiting State

Democratic presidential candidates and their spokesmen will continue to filter into Nebraska in the next few months.

Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana is tentatively scheduled to visit the state Sept. 28.

Sargent Shriver, the Democratic vice presidential candidate in 1972, is coming on Nov. 16.

And Congressman Tom Foley of Washington, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee and a protégé of Sen. Henry Jackson, will be in Nebraska Sept. 13.

He Refused To Retire

Tokyo (AP) — Takeo Yoshiji, 68, miserable at the prospect of retiring after 26 years as a top executive of a food company, cleared his desk, calmly bid farewell to his colleagues and jumped 10 stories to his death.

Bayh will visit the First Congressional District Democratic caucus in Fremont.

Shriver will address a Democratic caucus in the Third District.

Foley will be the principal speaker at a county fund-raising dinner in York.

POSTCARD

Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — "Take his temperature twice a day and bring him back in a week," said the vet. "We may have to watch that leg."

Our new gray-and-white kitten pulled up with a charley horse in a back leg. (Immediately we changed his name to Hopalong after the famous Western star of silent films.)

Did you know a cat's normal temperature is between 101 and 102 degrees? Something new and useful every day in this business.

I went to the drugstore and got a baby thermometer.

The children were impressed. They said: "How do you get him to hold it under his tongue?"

When I explained that, they shouted: "Gross!"

I said: "Never mind the applause. Hold Hopalong. Dr. Marcus Welby is about to operate."

No dull days around Snug Harbor. Presently we have a black cat name of Hell. The ailing kitten. A black cat who's boarding temporarily.

Good thing we like cats. The world is divided between cat lovers and cat haters. No in-betweeners. You adore them or you can't stand them around.

Famous cat lovers were the ancient Egyptians. When a household cat dies, the family shaved off their eyebrows in sorrow.

On the other hand there are famous cat haters. Napoleon. King Louis XVI and Alexander the Great couldn't stand the beasts.

About Hopalong now. I took his temperature (it was a degree high at the vet's) and now it was normal as Kansas in August.

The blooming baby thermometer cost me $3.25. I thought the kitten might have put up his fever at least one degree. A courtesy temperature.

My $3.25 was down the drain. Unless we set up shop with a sign: "Cats' Temperatures Taken. Open 24 Hours. No Waiting."

On top of that, the cat began to get over his gimpy leg even before we got the vet's bill.

Over the catnip years, I've tried to put my cats to work. Somebody figured there are 26.7 million household cats in the U.S. About half a million are gainfully employed.

Once I had a cat named Loophole — after a little tax thing I had in mind. I was going to claim him as a literary deduction, but the IRS got so salty about it I just gave up.

In Foyle's Art Gallery in London there used to be a chalk drawing done by a cat named Topsy.

Topsy's owner in Hertford hung a piece of chalk on a string for Topsy to play with.

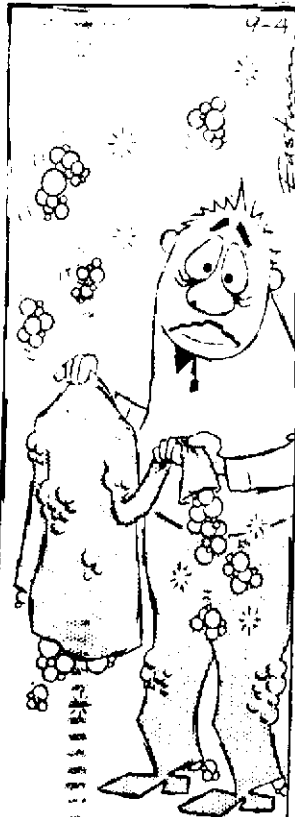

Well, the cat waited until the north light was just right. Then he pawed the hanging chalk against a piece of drawing paper.

When his owner returned, Topsy was dusting the chalk off his paws. He had turned out a decent enough drawing. Not an Old Master, but very good for a cat who had no artistic training.

Foyle's hung it in their distinguished art gallery. A one-cat show.

Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — "Take his temperature twice a day and bring him back in a week," said the vet. "We may have to watch that leg."

Our new gray-and-white kitten pulled up with a charley horse in a back leg. (Immediately we changed his name to Hopalong after the famous Western star of silent films.)

Did you know a cat's normal temperature is between 101 and 102 degrees? Something new and useful every day in this business.

I went to the drugstore and got a baby thermometer.

The children were impressed. They said: "How do you get him to hold it under his tongue?"

When I explained that, they shouted: "Gross!"

Beatrice Council Delays Annexation

By Southeast Nebraska Bureau
Beatrice — The proposed annexation of some 65 acres along east Lincoln and east Scott Sts. here will at least be delayed pending further study.
The city council voted 6-2 Wednesday night to send the proposal back to the planning and zoning commission for another look, though that group had recommended the action following several months of study and a public hearing.
Councilman Rod Henning succeeded in the delaying move, but requesting that the area be included in a "comprehensive study of possible annexation in all four directions." The only opposition votes were from Councilmen Bill Johnson and Allen Grell, both former planning and zoning commission members.

Approximately a dozen property owners from the Lincoln-Scott sections were present to oppose the annexation. They contended that much of the land is agricultural and would benefit little from joining the city.
"Almost 100% of us are not interested in coming in to the city at this time," Loren Bell, who owns 10 acres adjoining the present city limits, said.
Mayor Bob Sargent was among those favoring annexation, sighting a "growing need for some good residential lots." Johnson and Grell insisted that the proposal had undergone sufficient scrutiny and that systematic planning is taking place by area.

However, other councilmen argued it is unfair to annex on a "piecemeal basis" without considering the city's entire perimeter at once. Henning also noted that the nine member planning and zoning commission had registered only a 3-2 vote on the issue.
"That close a vote on such a heavy matter needs more input," he said.
On another matter, the council created four paving districts comprised of numerous scattered segments, after first deleting several streets at the request of petitioners. But Johnson's attempt to strike four segments which are in the floodplain failed on a 3-5 vote.

While Johnson questioned the justification of paving streets subject to flooding, some other councilmen noted that property owners would still have the right to delete their segments if they desired. Any street can still be petitioned out within 20 days of the publishing of the creating ordinances.
Appointed as new city attorney was Paul Korslund, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln graduate who has practiced the past year in Ravenna. He will replace Steve Von Riesen who will become an adviser to the Nebraska State Patrol.

Senate Kills Antibusing Amendment

Washington (AP) — The Senate voted Wednesday to kill an antibusing amendment that would have prohibited the Justice Department from asking for busing, school closings or involuntary student transfers as desegregation tools.
The amendment by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., was tabled on a vote of 42 to 35.
Nebraska's two Republican senators, Carl Curtis and Roman Hruska, voted against tabling. Thus they voted for the antibusing amendment.

Suicide Committed Aboard Jet

LONDON (AP) — A crewman shot and killed himself aboard a Soviet jetliner flying from New York to London on Wednesday and touched off a nine-hour diplomatic wrangle about who should investigate the death, Scotland Yard said.
"Police ... are satisfied," the brief statement said, "that there is no evidence of a criminal act and that the wound was self-inflicted." The plane was allowed to continue to Moscow.
The plane's 102 passengers, most believed to be American tourists headed for the Soviet Union, were herded into an airport lounge for questioning by police. The investigation for a time turned into a hassle over whether Soviet or British authorities were responsible for probing the case.
Edna Moraes, one of four London-bound passengers told newsmen after she was released by police that the plane had "suddenly wobbled and went much faster" during the flight, indicating the shooting may have occurred in the cockpit.
Police declined to give any details of the suicide, but the Evening News of London reported the dead man was the plane's navigator, aged between 30 and 40.
It quoted a Yard officer as saying the body was found slumped, naked from the waist up, in a first-class passenger seat, but it "had obviously been moved."
Miss Moraes said that soon after the Ilyushin 62 lurched in flight, "I saw an air hostess run into the first-class compartment with an oxygen mask. But I didn't hear any shots or see any body."
The diplomatic wrangle centered on exactly where the plane was when the man shot himself.
If the shooting occurred in international airspace, jurisdiction in the incident belonged to the Soviet Union as the nation in which the aircraft is registered. If it occurred in British airspace, then British authorities would handle the case.

Senators Send Letter On Beatrice Home Settlement

Two prominent state senators have written a U.S. District Judge telling him the Nebraska Unicameral has had a long-standing commitment to community-based programs for the mentally retarded.
Sen. Eugene Mahoney, chairman of the Legislature's Executive Board, and Sen. Richard Marvel, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, have sent the letter to Judge Albert Schatz in response to a proposed lawsuit settlement which calls for a reduction in the Beatrice State Home population from 1,100 to 250 within three years.
The pair said the tentative agreement "will demand many resources and commitments ... Your careful consideration is urged in the evaluation of this agreement for it will affect many Nebraska citizens."
Since the proposed agreement refers only to improvements in care for the retarded which have come through Gov. J. James Exon, Marvel and Mahoney listed seven legislative bills dating back to 1957 which deal with the retarded.

"These laws indicate that as early as 1957 the concept of community-based treatment and related programmatic services were not only contemplated but endorsed by the Nebraska Legislature," they said.
"The Legislature is concerned that program improvements must be made, though improvement is not necessarily related to the amount of dollars appropriated," they said. "We are familiar with the community-based deficiencies ... and the failure by the Beatrice State Home to receive accreditation. Future Legislatures will undoubtedly consider these shortcomings and make provision for their correction."

Star's Ashes To Be Buried After 10 Years

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The ashes of movie star Linda Darnell will be buried in a suburban Philadelphia cemetery 10 years after her death.
Miss Darnell, the dark-haired actress of the 1940s and 1950s, died from burns suffered in a 1965 fire in a friend's home near Chicago. Her will asked that she be cremated. The ashes remained at a Chicago cemetery for nine years.
The burial is being arranged by her adopted daughter, Mrs. James L. Adams Jr., of New London, Pa. She said a private ceremony will be conducted, possibly next week.
Miss Darnell made her movie debut in "Hotel for Women" in 1939. Among her other films were "Blood and Sand" and "Letter to Three Wives."

Old Log House Being Rebuilt

By BOB SCHREFF
Star Staff Writer

Roger Welsh feels like he knows the pioneer Nebraska farmer who built a nice log home for his family in eastern Seward County in the summer of 1862.

At least Welsh believes he knows a lot about the man, whom he admires for his energy and skill.

Because Welsh, a University of Nebraska folklorist from Lincoln, disassembled the old home log by log. Former students John Carter and Lynne Ireland helped to document the position of each of the pieces as it came down. It took four trips by truck to move the pieces, and Welsh is now reconstructing the home at his farm many miles to the north in the Loup River valley.

Welsh is sharing experiences with the long-dead farmer.

During that summer 113 years ago, the pioneer started to build a home for his family east of Pleasant Dale. He chiseled sandstone for the basement from a quarry within sight of where the house would stand. He cut hardwood trees for the lumber from a creek bed some 300 yards from the homestead.

Because of the time it took to trim up the logs, the farmer probably spent most of the summer building the house, Welsh figures.

And when he finished, he had a one-room log home with a stone basement and a loft for the kids to sleep in. Primitive by modern standards, it was nevertheless meant to be a house, not a cabin, and a very substantial house at that, Welsh surmises.

For the next hundred years and more — in fact, until fairly recently — the house was occupied by a succession of families. Over the years the inner log walls were covered with newspapers and whitewashed time and again, and then plastered, then alternately papered and painted. Studs were nailed to the logs on the outside and wooden siding covered up the original walls. After a few years nobody remembered it was built as a log house.

ETV Program

Earlier this year the ETV network was doing a program on the Great Depression and Welsh was asked to sing some period songs in front of an abandoned farm home.

One site chosen for filming was the old log house near Pleasant Dale. Some workers who had begun tearing the house down for scrap lumber told Welsh the inner walls were made of log. He talked to the owner, Wilmer Bishop of Lincoln, who said it was a very old log house and that he had tried but failed to interest various historical organizations in its preservation. He said he would gladly give it to Welsh to preserve it.

It was Bishop who pegged the building date at 1862. He based his guess on dates on the deed, initialing on an old barn door and talks with long-time residents of the area.

Welsh leaped at the chance to save the logs and "the sentiment which goes with the building."

Up it goes, log by log. It will be essentially the same as it was in the 1860s. Welsh will add a porch and a lean-to, which he imagines the farmer added as time went by.

Some Modernization

There will be some changes. Welsh will use cement chinking to fill the openings between the rough-hewn logs. Instead of the original ash poles held together by square nails forming the roof, Welsh will use mill-cut two-by-sixes. There will be a bay window arrangement added.

But, as in the original house, hardwood pegs will hold the top layer of logs together. And, as in the old days, only a woodburning cook stove will provide heat. There will be no electricity or running water.

"I've gained a real appreciation for the skill and energy of the man who built it in the first place," says Welsh, who with family and friends, will spend some six weekends putting the house together.

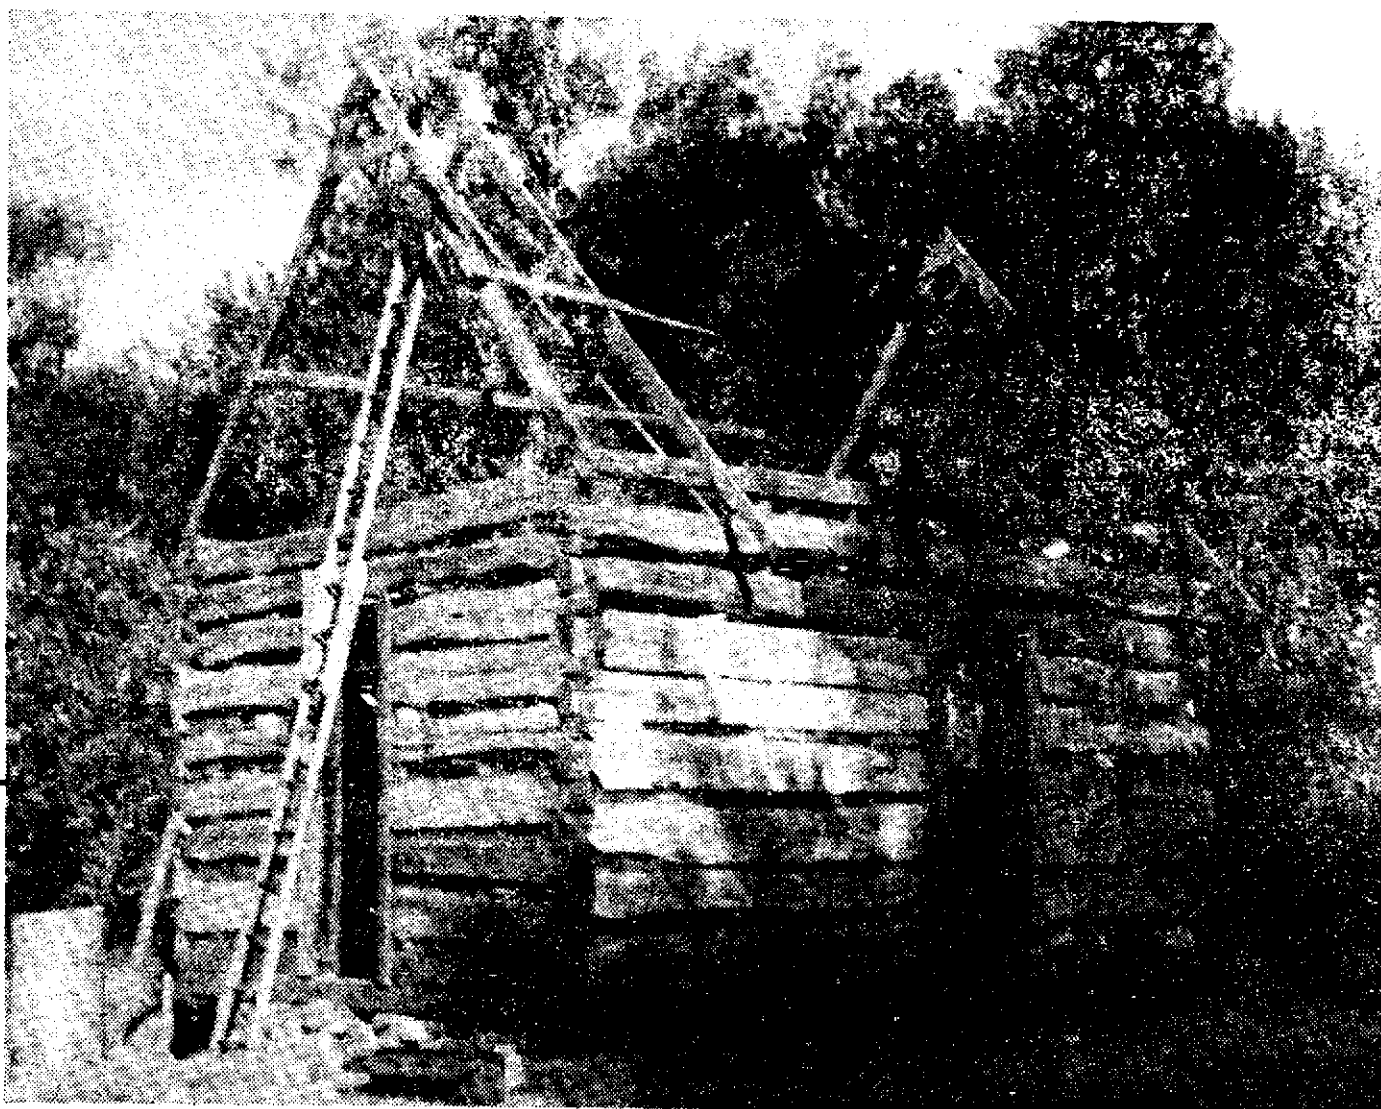

"If it was heavy for us to lift the logs it must have been twice as hard for him because they were probably green. If it was hard for us to get the top logs in place with a tractor and front-end loader, how hard must it have been for him with a team of horses? We cut the boards with a chain saw. Think how difficult it was for him with a hand saw and ax."

'Whatever Fit'

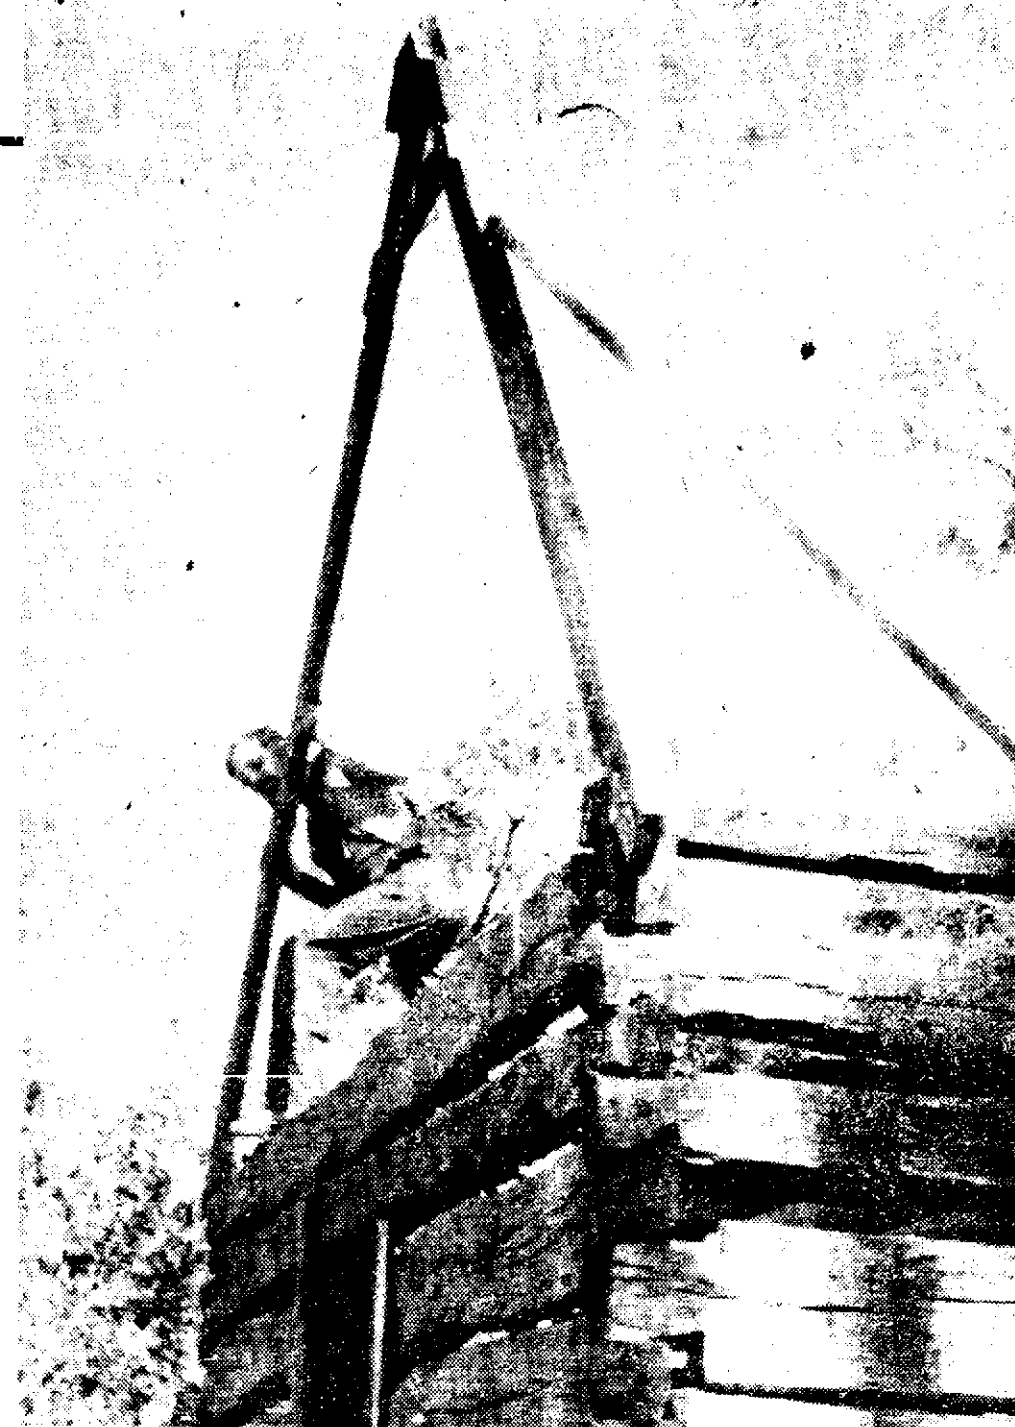

Welsh describes the old house jokingly as an example of "heterogeneous" architecture: "He used all kinds of notched corners. Whatever fit." John Carter adds that the house does not have a traditional door plan. Most people of that time would not put doors in a gabled end, Carter said. The original had — and it remains today — a door in a gabled end, superstition notwithstanding.

Getting a house which he thinks is suitable for his farm and reflective of his interest in early Nebraska has been a "very instructive experience," Welsh says. And he says he won't be able to teach subject matter about pioneer homes "the same way" again.

Not so dispassionately, at any rate.

A Week With Mr. Ford

When Gerald Ford, the newly ascended President, invited photographers and reporters into his kitchen late last summer, the stage was set.

The press recorded the historic toasting of the presidential breakfast muffin. The American appetite for president-watching was whetted.

After six years of Nixon famine, the feast was on the table. And when the onslaught of writers lined up for their share, John Hersey was among them.

As a result of negotiations between the White House staff and the New York Times, author Hersey ("A Bell for Adano," "Hiroshima") was invited to spend a week shadowing the President.

Hersey's record of that week — the week of March 10, 1975 — is contained in his new book, "The President" (Knopf).

As Hersey follows Ford from senior staff meetings, to Cabinet meetings, to lunch, to receptions, he learns that What They Say About Ford is essentially accurate.

Ford's actions, his comments to Hersey and others, reveal a congenial, up-front, simple man.

During a reception for a newly appointed Cabinet member, Hersey sees Ford at his speaking worst. And he reports, "I get a lift from his awkwardness. I am glad President Ford is a hard case for the hired image-makers... It is likely that the real Gerald Ford, for better or for worse, will always be visible and audible to the citizenry, no matter how hard the experts try to disguise him."

Earlier that same day, Hersey had seen a different Ford; a relaxed, confident president who sat through the daily senior staff meeting, fielding questions, offering opinions with ease and grace.

Later on, Ford is equally at ease when Shirley Cothran, Miss America 1975, pays a visit to the Oval Office. Shifting gears with a meeting with Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, Ford tells Miss Cothran that "My wife and I watch the Miss America contest all the time."

The brief meeting over, one almost expects Ford to pat the bubbling miss on the head and send her on her way. In a sense, he does.

Returning to the heavier events and issues that dominated that week — the imminent fall of Cambodia and Vietnam, the tax bill pending in Congress — Hersey is somewhat disconcerted by what he sees as "another side of the man who has been so considerate, so open and so kind to me as an individual."

During a meeting on the tax bill, Ford seems to Hersey "a million miles away from many Americans who have been hardworking people all their lives and are now feeling the cruel pinch of hard times."

There is a "big business, boardroom tone" about the administration, Hersey writes.

Ford, from time to time, exhibits a stubborn streak. An idea, once in Ford's mind, is there to stay. "He yields, but only to a certain point; beyond that point, he tranquilizes."

Hersey remains somewhat bothered by these tendencies throughout the book. Excluded from all foreign policy sessions, he is alarmed by the realization that only one man — Henry Kissinger — advises Ford in this area.

On domestic issues "the President has heard numerous advisory voices. But foreign policy is apparently of a different order."

Yet, despite these reservations, Hersey concludes: "... although I am deeply troubled by some of his policies, and by the long reach and rigidity of his conservatism, I have nevertheless come to like him as a man — he has been most kind and generous with me; his good laugh, when I have heard it, has filled me with its energy and warmth."

And between the lines we can read: Perhaps that is enough.

Youths Given Taste Of Outdoors

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

Nebraska's wilderness areas have become classrooms for several of Lincoln's high school students.

Void of walls, windows, textbooks, desks and chalkboards, these "classrooms" provide learning through the concrete and the abstract, through decision-making and problem-solving, through adventure and quiet solitude — they are the settings for Nebraska Outdoor Encounter expeditions.

Taste Of Outdoors

In its first year, Outdoor Encounter is a program designed to give students a taste of the real out-of-doors, where animals — small and large — keep you company, where only small tents and tall pines provide shelter and where river rapids, rugged hills and tempestuous storms provide adventure.

Gary Gabelhouse, program coordinator, said student participants, accompanied by two trained instructors, learn to live with nature during the week-long expedition.

Developed and operated under the auspices of the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission, the program utilizes the Pine Ridge area in northwestern Nebraska and Halsey National Forest as expedition sites.

Learn Through Experience

Although the expedition is classified as educational, there are no structured lectures. Learning is done through experience, Gabelhouse said.

"There is a strong environmental emphasis, along with group dynamics," he said. "In the environmental area, a lot is based on sensory awareness."

"For example, blindfolded students are led through a natural area, so that they can take inventory of the area with the sight sensory shut off."

The same principle is used by "plugging up the nose and ears, then releasing each sense one at a time," the coordinator added, so that students become acutely aware of what is perceived through seeing, hearing and smelling.

Cooperation Is Key

Simulated crises stressing cooperation include setting up a tent blindfolded — "in case one blows down during the night", getting all members across a "peanut butter swamp" without a casualty; or transporting equipment and group members over an electric fence.

And, on occasion, there are real, live, harrowing situations the group must survive, like the March blizzard which caught students and instructors alike in the middle of nowhere.

"The whole idea of group participation was there," Gabelhouse said. "If it had not been, everyone would have been a lot more uncomfortable."

On Their Own

Also, every trip features a solo expedition, in which students equipped with "minimum but adequate supplies and gear are left alone and checked on daily."

Through the activities — whether group or solo — students are taught how to live in the wilderness without having a harmful impact on the natural surroundings, Gabelhouse stressed.

Although students are charged $30 each for necessary equipment — tent, sleeping bag, backpack — and food, Gabelhouse explained that initially the program was funded "almost 100%" by Lincoln businessmen. He added that Willard Barbee, commission director, also was instrumental in getting the program started.

"I don't know of any other state whose Game and Parks Commission takes such an educational role," Gabelhouse said.

Available Around State

"Previously, we focused primarily on the Lincoln area, because the program was based in Lincoln," he said, but during the 1975-76 year, the program will be available to high school students throughout the state.

"We plan to expand the program to two expeditions per month year round," he said, adding that one day he hopes the program will be incorporated into the high school curriculums.

"Of the participants, 80% to 90% have had no outdoor experience," Gabelhouse said. "There is no way you can train anyone in a week to be an experienced outdoorsman. But we can give them some experience."

"We can make them more conscious of the environment and the uses of it," explained Abby Lannan, one of the program's five staff members.

Chicago — Amid the cries of liberationists, not a word has been spoken in behalf of one oppressed group — those of us who are short. We live in a society designed for tall people.

Imagine how difficult it is to read English subtitles in foreign films if you are 5 feet 1 inch and a person 5 feet 10 inches sits in front of you. Who is the insensitive giant who decreed that captions be at the bottom of the screen instead of the top?

Even watching a film without subtitles has its perils for us shrimps. Seldom am I fortunate enough to sit behind a person my height or — heavenly bliss — a vacant seat.

The theater is not much better. It's not so bad if I know the person on either side of me. But it can be embarrassing leaning on a stranger's shoulder.

A ballet performance at a theater that is not bowl-shaped is a complete waste of time. I never see the dancers' feet. And watching a dance from the waist up is right dull. My dream is to have my own theater, where seats are assigned according to height — the way it used to be done in school. I always had a seat in the first row.

Some of the few innovations for shorties are the power seat and adjustable steering wheel on today's automobiles. I used to sit on a pillow to get a clear view.

Imagine my chagrin when my daughter asked me to drive her sports car. I descended into a bucket seat that seemed at least 10 inches below sea level. All I could see was the top of the steering wheel.

Even shopping for food has its perils and frustrations. Take cereal, for instance. If the item needed is in a newly stacked pile on the top shelf, there is no way I can reach it. And I'm not skilled enough to risk easing one box from the bottom of the stack. So I search for a stock boy or a tall fellow shopper.

Buying clothes is another problem. Tunics are definitely out. Platform shoes are — whoopee!

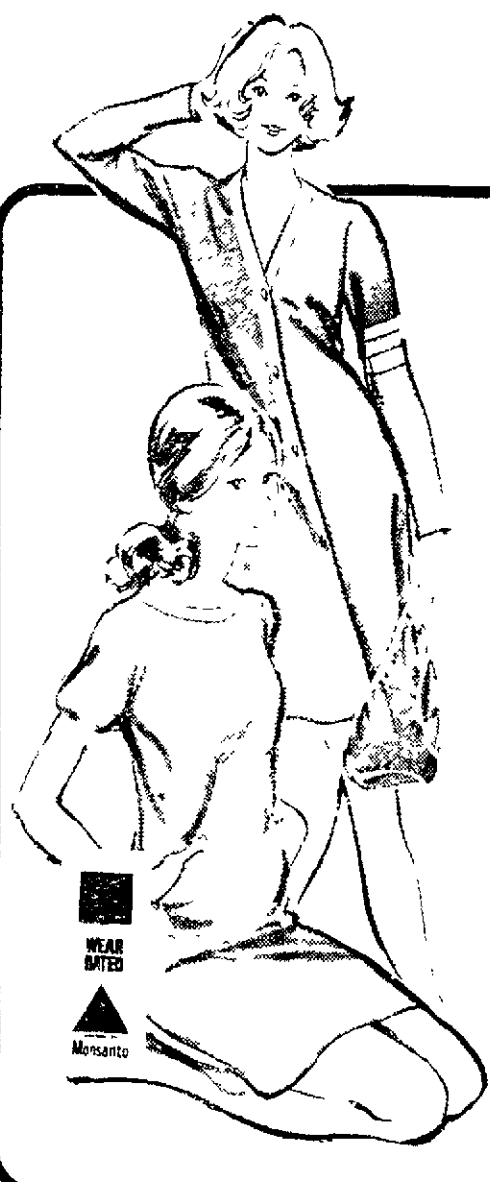

Thank goodness my daughters are taller than I, although this presented some problems when they were growing up. It's difficult to command when your children are looking down at you.

I wonder how Napoleon managed?

I'll never forget the day two of our dearest — albeit tall — friends visited with their children. Not only were the two older children taller than I, but so was the 10-year-old.

One of my lifelong dreams recently came true when we built our own home. I was able to design the kitchen to my specifications. After many years of pulling out stepladders to get a can of soup, I now can reach every shelf and cabinet.

Today my kitchen — tomorrow the world!

By GRACIA McANDREW
Star Staff Writer

Nebraska's wilderness areas have become classrooms for several of Lincoln's high school students.

Void of walls, windows, textbooks, desks and chalkboards, these "classrooms" provide learning through the concrete and the abstract, through decision-making and problem-solving, through adventure and quiet solitude — they are the settings for Nebraska Outdoor Encounter expeditions.

Taste Of Outdoors

In its first year, Outdoor Encounter is a program designed to give students a taste of the real out-of-doors, where animals — small and large — keep you company, where only small tents and tall pines provide shelter and where river rapids, rugged hills and tempestuous storms provide adventure.

Gary Gabelhouse, program coordinator, said student participants, accompanied by two trained instructors, learn to live with nature during the week-long expedition.

Developed and operated under the auspices of the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission, the program utilizes the Pine Ridge area in northwestern Nebraska and Halsey National Forest as expedition sites.

Learn Through Experience

Although the expedition is classified as educational, there are no structured lectures. Learning is done through experience, Gabelhouse said.

"There is a strong environmental emphasis, along with group dynamics," he said. "In the environmental area, a lot is based on sensory awareness."

"For example, blindfolded students are led through a natural area, so that they can take inventory of the area with the sight sensory shut off."

The same principle is used by "plugging up the nose and ears, then releasing each sense one at a time," the coordinator added, so that students become acutely aware of what is perceived through seeing, hearing and smelling.

Cooperation Is Key

Simulated crises stressing cooperation include setting up a tent blindfolded — "in case one blows down during the night"; getting all members across a "peanut butter swamp" without a casualty; or transporting equipment and group members over an electric fence.

And, on occasion, there are real, live, harrowing situations the group must survive, like the March blizzard which caught students and instructors alike in the middle of nowhere.

"The whole idea of group participation was there," Gabelhouse said. "If it had not been, everyone would have been a lot more uncomfortable."

On Their Own

Also, every trip features a solo expedition, in which students equipped with "minimum but adequate supplies and gear are left alone and checked on daily."

Through the activities — whether group or solo — students are taught how to live in the wilderness without having a harmful impact on the natural surroundings, Gabelhouse stressed.

Although students are charged $30 each for necessary equipment — tent, sleeping bag, backpack — and food, Gabelhouse explained that initially the program was funded "almost 100%" by Lincoln businessmen. He added that Willard Barbee, commission director, also was instrumental in getting the program started.

"I don't know of any other state whose Game and Parks Commission takes such an educational role," Gabelhouse said.

Available Around State

"Previously, we focused primarily on the Lincoln area, because the program was based in Lincoln," he said, but during the 1975-76 year, the program will be available to high school students throughout the state.

"We plan to expand the program to two expeditions per month year round," he said, adding that one day he hopes the program will be incorporated into the high school curriculums.

"Of the participants, 80% to 90% have had no outdoor experience," Gabelhouse said. "There is no way you can train anyone in a week to be an experienced outdoorsman. But we can give them some experience."

"We can make them more conscious of the environment and the uses of it," explained Abby Lannan, one of the program's five staff members.

'Dolly' Headed For Broadway

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Hello, Dolly," which lasted 2,844 performances on Broadway, is headed back for another run.

The musical starring Pearl Bailey and Billy Daniels has been doing such good business on a national tour that its producers plan to open it at the Minskoff Theater in New York on Oct. 15. "Hello, Dolly" will also play the National Theater in Washington, D.C., beginning Dec. 2. It opens a six-week run here at the Shubert Theater Sept. 2.

Hot Air

A giant hot air balloon painted to resemble the planet earth rises briefly over Washington Wednesday in a bicentennial event that barely got off the ground. The 80-foot balloon was launched to promote world championship balloon races in Albuquerque, N.M., in October. Because of strong winds, the balloon was held by a tether and free flight was ruled out by aviation authorities.

Father Shouldn't Sleep With Her

DEAR ABBY: My brother's wife recently died leaving him with a 13-year-old daughter.

When the child feels unhappy, afraid or lonely, or when there are houseguests and a shortage of beds, her father allows her to sleep with him. (This occurs every two weeks.)

He says he doesn't want her to grow up remembering that her father made her stay alone at night when she was blue or upset. He worries about her emotional security as she has demonstrated a fear of losing her parents since she was adopted as an infant.

The recent death of her mother was very traumatic for her.

Could you or your readers offer some experiences that would enlighten this father or me?

SIS

DEAR SIS: Under NO circumstances should a 13-year-old girl be sleeping with her father. In fact, my psychiatric consultants state that beyond the age of four, no child should sleep with a parent of the opposite sex. If your brother tries to justify his actions, he desperately needs professional help.

No doubt he is also lonely, but substituting his daughter for his wife (which he could unconsciously be doing) is sick.

DEAR ABBY: We are the parents of a 1-year-old daughter. We both work and do not plan on having any more children.

How do you feel about raising an only child? I am tired of hearing that it's "unfair" to our daughter to be raised as an only child.

We feel that as long as she gets plenty of love and discipline she will be all right. Have you any statistics to support or oppose raising an only child?

TULSA PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Don't look for statistics. You have the right idea.

DEAR ABBY: Recently I had dinner at an expensive restaurant and the total bill (for eight people) came to $60.

When the waiter handed me the bill he whispered, "A 10 per cent tip is not included in the bill."

Is it proper for a waiter to try to hustle a tip this way? He caught me off guard.

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: It was not only "improper" but a good way for the waiter to lose his job. You would have done him a favor had you warned him of the consequences.

DEAR ABBY: How does a happily married 35-year-old woman handle flirtations initiated by a married man in the presence of both spouses?

I find myself very much embarrassed, and needless to say, his wife and my husband are not exactly overjoyed.

How can such a man be put in his place in a nice but firm manner? We run into this couple fairly often, and I am dreading the next encounter.

FLUSTERED

DEAR FLUSTERED: When next you meet, give Casanova an impersonal hello, then promptly launch into small talk with his wife. Keep it a two-way conversation until you depart. No man can "flirt" without a partner.

Opening lead - seven of spades.

When declarer has a choice of two methods of play, he naturally tries to select the one that offers the better chance. He chooses what is called the percentage play.

Consider this deal where West leads a spade and declarer sees he may lose two club tricks. Consequently, all his thoughts are concentrated on trying to limit himself to one club loser.

He realizes that the clubs may be divided so that he must lose two tricks, whatever he does. But he also realizes that the slam can be made if the clubs are favorably divided.

South lays his plans accordingly. He wins the spade lead and ruffs a spade. After drawing trumps, he cashes three hearts, discarding a club from dummy. He then crosses to dummy with a trump and leads a club, East following low.

Now comes the crucial decision. If South makes the percentage play of the ace, he makes the slam. When West plays the ten on the ace, declarer continues with a low club to West's king. West must then return a spade or a heart, and in either case South ruffs in his hand as he discards dummy's last club. Declarer now ruffs a club in dummy and his day's work is done.

It may be argued that this method of play fails if East's clubs include the K-Q. In that event, finessing the jack would be the only way to make the slam.

This is true enough, but the fact is that playing the ace succeeds more often than playing the jack. The recommended play gains whenever West has the singleton or doubleton king or queen, or the tripleton king or queen.

These combinations far outnumber those where East has the K-Q.

Poll Says: Police, Firemen Strikes Opposed

By LOUIS HARRIS

Although the public recognizes the right of government workers to belong to unions, most Americans are growing increasingly doubtful about the right of firemen and policemen to go out on strike. By 50-46%, the American people now believe that policemen should not have the right to strike, a turnaround from the slim, 47-46% plurality who felt differently in 1974.

This current feeling against strikes by the uniformed services is only one part of a generally negative turn in public opinion about unions of government employees:

— By 86-8%, a massive majority feels that "people who work for the government have working conditions as good or better" than people employed in private business.

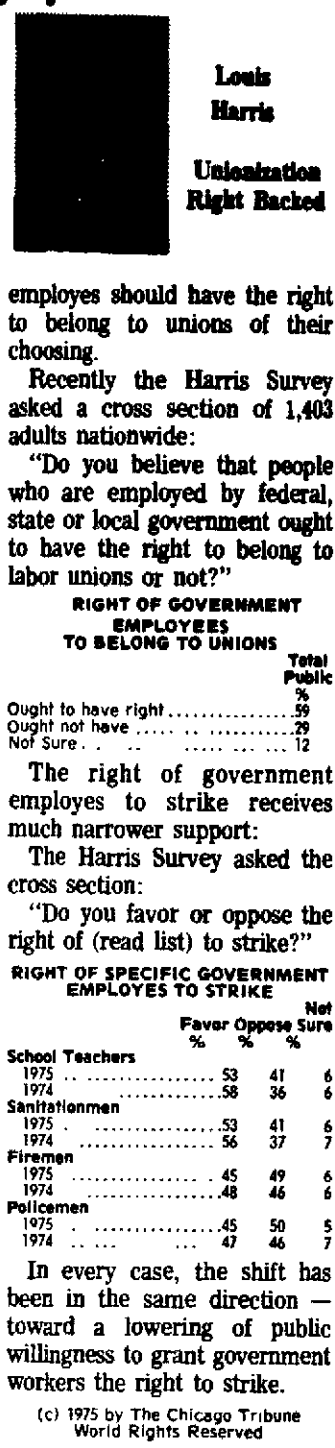

— By 84-7%, a majority also believes that government employees "have pension and retirement benefits as good or better" than those employed by private business.

— By 76-15%, a large majority also feels that those working for the government "are paid just as high or higher salaries" than people employed in private business.

— By 56-28%, a two-to-one majority believes that "government employees have as good or better chances to express grievances over work."

— Significantly, by 52-38%, a majority also does not believe that people working for government "work as hard or harder" than people employed in private business.

Nonetheless, a majority of the public still believes government

Life Begins At Forty: Heredity, Life Style Factors In Longevity

By JOANNE FARRIS

QUESTION: "Every time I read about some person of 80 or 85 or 90 who is in good health and spirits for that age I wonder why they are getting along so well when others of the same age or younger are ill or feeble or senile. Do you have any theories about this?"

ANSWER: Most doctors seem to agree that the first qualification for a long, healthy life is to pick parents who have long, healthy lives. Unfortunately we can't do that, but there does seem to be a correlation here between generations.

One general rule for longevity is: Don't be fat. Enjoy eating but don't overeat, and maintain a well-balanced diet. Dr. Jean Mayer, the famous Harvard nutritionist, suggests that if you need to lose some weight, follow a balanced diet and cut down on the size of the portions.

Diet fads and nutritional quackery are valueless. Food fads are awfully easy to sell to older persons who keep hoping that somewhere they find the miraculous road to eternal youth. It's time to wake up to the reality that good health requires sensible eating.

Another rule for long life that has wide acceptance is staying active in some meaningful social role. No one wants to be put into a category and forgotten as an individual. If we can't keep the meaningful role we had earlier in life, then it behooves us to seek out a new one.

Often this means developing new interests, changing routines and old patterns, perhaps even moving to a new setting.

But by keeping our brains active and establishing our old years in a way that has meaning, we can fulfill ourselves in new ways, and prolong the fullness of life.

QUESTION: "My father is 77. Since my mother died five months ago he's been on a merry-go-round of activity. First he went off to Palm Springs and played golf, then he came home and began going to every dinner party he was invited to.

"Now, he takes this 55-year-old widow out about every other night, and I think he's getting pretty serious about her.

"My brother says to let him do what he wants, but I think he should not be dating when my mother hasn't even been dead six months. What is your opinion?"

ANSWER: I agree with your brother. At your father's age I think he's entitled to enjoy his life as he wants to. Do you feel threatened by this widow he likes?

After all, your father presumably gave your mother loyal attention during her lifetime. I say you should not pass judgment on him. Read the first part of this column and realize how lucky he is to be well, and how lucky you are to have a healthy father who is doing something to keep himself well.

Poll Says: Police, Firemen Strikes Opposed

By LOUIS HARRIS

Although the public recognizes the right of government workers to belong to unions, most Americans are growing increasingly doubtful about the right of firemen and policemen to go out on strike. By 50-45%, the American people now believe that policemen should not have the right to strike, a turnaround from the slim, 47-46% plurality who felt differently in 1974.

This current feeling against strikes by the uniformed services is only one part of a generally negative turn in public opinion about unions of government employees:

— By 86-8%, a massive majority feels that "people who work for the government have working conditions as good or better" than people employed in private business.

— By 84-7%, a majority also believes that government employees "have pension and retirement benefits as good or better" than those employed by private business.

— By 76-15%, a large majority also feels that those working for the government "are paid just as high or higher salaries" than people employed in private business.

— By 56-28%, a two-to-one majority believes that "government employees have as good or better chances to express grievances over work."

— Significantly, by 52-38%, a majority also does not believe that people working for government "work as hard or harder" than people employed in private business.

Nonetheless, a majority of the public still believes government

Life Begins At Forty: Heredity, Life Style Factors In Longevity

By JOANNE FARRIS

QUESTION: "Every time I read about some person of 80 or 85 or 90 who is in good health and spirits for that age I wonder why they are getting along so well when others of the same age or younger are ill or feeble or senile. Do you have any theories about this?"

ANSWER: Most doctors seem to agree that the first qualification for a long, healthy life is to pick parents who have long, healthy lives. Unfortunately we can't do that, but there does seem to be a correlation here between generations.

One general rule for longevity is: Don't be fat. Enjoy eating but don't overeat, and maintain a well-balanced diet. Dr. Jean Mayer, the famous Harvard nutritionist, suggests that if you need to lose some weight, follow a balanced diet and cut down on the size of the portions.

Diet fads and nutritional quackery are valueless. Food fads are awfully easy to sell to older persons who keep hoping that somewhere they find the miraculous road to eternal youth. It's time to wake up to the reality that good health requires sensible eating.

Budget Requests Closed Until New Law Clarified

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

State agencies' budget requests will be closed to public inspection until the attorney general has further clarified a new state law limiting access to computerized information on state employees.

John Jacobson, state budget administrator, indicated the budget requests could be considered off limits to public inspection under the new law since salary items in the requests are fed into the state computer system.

As yet, no agency requests have been received, although the deadline for budget requests is Sept. 15.

In the past such records have been inspected freely by the press.

The change results from a new state law aimed at protecting personnel records of state employees from the central data processing system. The bill was amended by Sen. John Cavanaugh of Omaha to prevent suppression of information considered public record.

However, Special Asst. Atty. Gen. Marilyn Hutchinson has interpreted the law to strictly limit public access to computer data on employees.

She said public information would still be available through state agencies without going through the computer system.

Stan Matzke, state director of administrative services, has asked for clarification as to what is restricted under the law. Until such clarification is received, Matzke presumes all such information is limited under the law, since he could face sanctions for distributing restricted information.

As yet, Mrs. Hutchinson has not answered Matzke's inquiries. The attorney general's staff has a heavy work load and the computer information question is not a priority, she has said.

Cavanaugh has taken issue with the opinion, saying Mrs. Hutchinson has "a history of attempting to obstruct access to public records."

If Mrs. Hutchinson's clarifications are not to his liking, Cavanaugh said he will seek changes during the 1976 Legislature to accomplish his intent.

Don Shasteen, an aide to Senator Carl Curtis, R-Nebr., said in a telephone interview that a proposed amendment to the bill would establish an insurance program funded by deducting the equivalent of about five cents from the sale price of a head of cattle.

Shasteen said the proposal, a mandatory deduction for all livestock and poultry sales, would build a fund of about $25 million to cover losses incurred when a packer went bankrupt.

The proposal also would allow the secretary of agriculture to borrow additional funds to pay farmers for their livestock if a packer goes bankrupt.

Shasteen said the proposal was considered better than bonding which some feel would eliminate small packing companies.

Shasteen said Curtis hoped to gain support from the administration by finding a way around objections to the cost of the program. A specific percentage of the money could be used to expand enforcement of a requiring packers either be financially sound before buying livestock or furnish certified checks to farmers, Shasteen said.

The proposal is under study by Senator Dick Clark, D-Iowa, and other Midwest senators.

Proposals May Revive Livestock Bill

New proposals are trying to revive the chances for a Livestock Sellers Protection Act despite the Ford Administration's opposition to increased spending for an expanded agency to protect sellers of livestock and poultry.

Don Shasteen, an aide to Senator Carl Curtis, R-Nebr., said in a telephone interview that a proposed amendment to the bill would establish an insurance program funded by deducting the equivalent of about five cents from the sale price of a head of cattle.

Registration Reported Up For SeTech

Early registration "is really booming" for courses offered by the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College, Bill Cooley area information director said Wednesday.

On the first day, 500 people signed up for adult community education programs, which is "10-15% above (registrations) last year at this time," according to Cooley.

Full-time fall quarter programs begin Oct. 1 at the college's Fairbury, Lincoln and Milford campuses. Adult programs begin the week of Sept. 15.

Cooley said about 4,500 adults — more than 3,500 of them in Lincoln — enrolled in fall courses last year. That represented a substantial increase for the evening programs, which could mushroom again this month.

Total registrations for all four quarters throughout the college was 15,000 during 1974-75, Cooley said.

"We're getting a lot of good response" to an information booth set up at the Nebraska State Fair in Lincoln, he said. Three fairgoers left the booth with interviews set for possible admission as full-time students. And another 17 expressed strong interest, Cooley said.

Meanwhile, he's been answering tons of questions from passersby. Judging from queries, auto mechanics and building construction at Milford, are the two most popular courses, he said. The Lincoln campus nursing program, also interests people.

"Health programs are popular, business and secretarial-clerical are moving up, and child care is going good," Cooley said.

Woman, 93, Beats Hike In Postage

Chapman, Kan. (UPI) — Edith Chenoweth refused to let postal rate increases interfere with this year's mailing of her handmade Christmas cards. She has already mailed them.

The 93-year-old nursing home resident finished the 40 cards earlier this year, and they were mailed the first week in August.

She said at her age "life is uncertain," and the money saved by avoiding the expected 13-cent rate was worth the premature effort.

Marsh Discloses Agreement With NBC

The state is keeping a $115,000 minimum balance with the National Bank of Commerce to compensate NBC for its management of the state's $160 million security portfolio.

State Treasurer Frank Marsh disclosed the terms of the agreement Thursday after his office received its first computer print-out of securities activity for July.

Marsh said the report did not total the number of transactions recorded.

The NBC agreement, Marsh said, is the best he could find after checking with national and other Nebraska banks. The NBC agreement, he said, tops Morgan Guaranty Bank of New York's offer to manage the securities in exchange for the same minimum balance plus a $7,000 service charge.

Marsh was hesitant to release the compensatory balance figure due to the competitive nature of banking and possible misunderstanding of what the state was getting for its money.

By computerizing the securities, Marsh said, NBC has been able to do more with security management than his staff could do.

The arrangement, he said, insures prompt investment of dividends and interest payments and moves the state one step closer to the day all of the primary financial officers for the state will have a common set of figures.

So long as the state maintains that balance with NBC, there will be no charges for servicing of the securities, he said.

The terms of the agreement, Marsh said, are "advantageous" to the state.

UNL Hosts Ellipsometry Convention This Month

About 200 scientists from throughout the world will be in Lincoln Sept. 23-25 to attend the third international Ellipsometry Conference.

The meeting will be held at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education. This is the second of the organization's international meetings to be held at

UNL. The last meeting here was in 1968.

Ellipsometry is a science devoted to the study of surfaces. It is related to the improvement of electronic and optical devices, chemical processes which have energy implications and cancer research.

Forty-six research reports will be presented during the three-day conference. Twenty-one will be given by foreign scientists and engineers.

Four papers will report on research at the University of Nebraska conducted by N.M. Bashara, R.M. Azzam, A.R.M. Zaghlool and M. El-Shazly Zaghlool.

Full-time fall quarter programs begin Oct. 1 at the college's Fairbury, Lincoln and Milford campuses. Adult programs begin the week of Sept. 15.

Cooley said about 4,500 adults — more than 3,500 of them in Lincoln — enrolled in fall courses last year. That represented a substantial increase for the evening programs, which could mushroom again this month.

Total registrations for all four quarters throughout the college was 15,000 during 1974-75, Cooley said.

"We're getting a lot of good response" to an information booth set up at the Nebraska State Fair in Lincoln, he said. Three fairgoers left the booth with interviews set for possible admission as full-time students. And another 17 expressed strong interest, Cooley said.

Meanwhile, he's been answering tons of questions from passersby. Judging from queries, auto mechanics and building construction at Milford, are the two most popular courses, he said. The Lincoln campus nursing program, also interests people.

"Health programs are popular, business and secretarial-clerical are moving up, and child care is going good," Cooley said.

terpreted the law to strictly limit public access to computer data on employees.

She said public information would still be available through state agencies without going through the computer system.

Stan Matzke, state director of administrative services, has asked for clarification as to what is restricted under the law. Until such clarification is received, Matzke presumes all such information is limited under the law, since he could face sanctions for distributing restricted information.

As yet, Mrs. Hutchinson has not answered Matzke's inquiries. The attorney general's staff has a heavy work load and the computer information question is not a priority, she has said.

Cavanaugh has taken issue with the opinion, saying Mrs. Hutchinson has "a history of attempting to obstruct access to public records."

If Mrs. Hutchinson's clarifications are not to his liking, Cavanaugh said he will seek changes during the 1976 Legislature to accomplish his intent.

Woman, 93, Beats Hike In Postage

Chapman, Kan. (UPI) — Edith Chenoweth refused to let postal rate increases interfere with this year's mailing of her handmade Christmas cards. She has already mailed them.

The 93-year-old nursing home resident finished the 40 cards earlier this year, and they were mailed the first week in August.

She said at her age "life is uncertain," and the money saved by avoiding the expected 13-cent rate was worth the premature effort.

Marsh Discloses Agreement With NBC

The state is keeping a $115,000 minimum balance with the National Bank of Commerce to compensate NBC for its management of the state's $160 million security portfolio.

State Treasurer Frank Marsh disclosed the terms of the agreement Thursday after his office received its first computer printout of securities activity for July.

Marsh said the report did not total the number of transactions recorded.

The NBC agreement, Marsh said, is the best he could find after checking with national and other Nebraska banks. The NBC agreement, he said, tops Morgan Guaranty Bank of New York's offer to manage the securities in exchange for the same minimum balance plus a $7,000 service charge.

Marsh was hesitant to release the compensatory balance figure due to the competitive nature of banking and possible misunderstanding of what the state was getting for its money.

By computerizing the securities, Marsh said, NBC has been able to do more with security management than his staff could do.

The arrangement, he said, insures prompt investment of dividends and interest payments and moves the state one step closer to the day all of the primary financial officers for the state will have a common set of figures.

So long as the state maintains that balance with NBC, there will be no charges for servicing of the securities, he said.

The terms of the agreement, Marsh said, are "advantageous" to the state.

UNL Hosts Ellipsometry Convention This Month

About 200 scientists from throughout the world will be in Lincoln Sept. 23-25 to attend the third international Ellipsometry Conference.

The meeting will be held at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education. This is the second of the organization's international meetings to be held at

UNL. The last meeting here was in 1968.

Ellipsometry is a science devoted to the study of surfaces. It is related to the improvement of electronic and optical devices, chemical processes which have energy implications and cancer research.

Forty-six research reports will be presented during the three-day conference. Twenty-one will be given by foreign scientists and engineers.

Four papers will report on research at the University of Nebraska conducted by N.M. Bashara, R.M.A. Azzam, A.R.M. Zaghloul and M. El-Shazly Zaghloul.

Bias Found In School Discipline

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Health, Education and Welfare said Wednesday hundreds of school districts are applying more severe disciplinary measures to minority students than to white children.

"In many hundreds of school systems throughout the nation, minority children are receiving a disproportionate number of discipline actions in the form of expulsions and suspensions and are being suspended for longer periods than non-minority children," HEW said.

HEW's Office for Civil Rights, in a memorandum sent to all 50 state school superintendents, said it has launched an investigation of disciplinary measures in the school districts.

The agency said disclosure of the possible violations of the 1964 Civil Rights Act were discovered during a review of data submitted annually by all school districts receiving federal funds.

Under provisions of the Civil Rights Act, school districts found in violation could lose federal education funds if they refuse to comply with the law.

The memo reminded the state school officers that school systems must retain records of student disciplinary actions for at least two years.

In another report on discrimination, HEW said it has found numerous instances of discrimination in special education programs.

The agency said it has issued new federal guidelines on how to avoid discrimination in the programs for the gifted, retarded, emotionally disturbed and physically handicapped to more than 16,000 state and local school leaders.

HEW said it had found many practices "which have the effect of denying equality of education opportunity on the basis of race, color, national origin or sex" in assigning youngsters to special education classes. Some districts have been accused previously of putting disadvantaged black youths in classes for the mentally retarded or socially maladjusted.

Same, Old Sooners — Threat For Big 8, National Titles

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Norman, Okla. — Oklahoma's problems in football so far in preseason practice are superficial. The Sooners have a few players who are 'hurting' but there are none who have injuries that will sideline them for the season.

The Sooners haven't lost a football game in their last 29 tries with only a tie to blemish that record. During that span, however, they've been virtually free of crippling injuries.

Since last season, there have been knee operations performed on nine Oklahoma players, including front liners Anthony Bryant, defensive tackle, tight end Keith Thomas and defensive end Duane Baccus.

Bryant and Baccus haven't full-same type injury which plagued Nebraska middle guard John Lee late last season.

"He's our best linebacker," Switzer told Big Eight Skywriters Wednesday afternoon. "He has been out eight or nine days and it's questionable whether we can count on him. It's an injury that sometimes is slow to heal."

So much for the sob story, although the situation would be a concern with any football coach. It's difficult to believe the Sooners have run out of quality football players. The replacement might not be "super" but he certainly is a young man with ability.

In fact, Switzer indirectly said the same thing when he was asked to comment on the loss of

THE LINCOLN STAR

Sports

Thursday, September 4, 1975 19

Nebraska's top defensive tackle Ron Pruitt.

"With the type of program they have, they have to have someone capable of playing the position," the OU coach said. "The quality might fall off, but that doesn't put Nebraska in a 'give up' position."

OU Defense

Oklahoma will have a more-than-adequate defense, manned by the Selmon brothers, tackle offensive line that is more than adequate.

"We have the best depth we've ever had at quarterback," the Sooner boss said. "At half-back, we've got the most running back talent we've had."

Jimmy Littrell, quick-hitting fullback, returns to the spot where he averaged 6.7 yards a carry last season.

The star running back, of course, is Joe Washington, a fellow who is a legitimate Heisman Trophy candidate and Switzer indicated he's going to let him pile up impressive statistics in a bid to win the award.

"If Joe is to win we have to be successful early as a team," Switzer said. "Joe has to produce a lot of yardage early and we've got to win to help him. We're going to let him do all the playing he wants this season."

That could be bad news for OU opponents since Washington carried the ball only 194 times (an average of 17 a game) for 1,321 yards in 1974's 11-0 season. He was in on only six plays against Wake Forest, for example.

The tougher Oklahoma schedule might require his presence a little more since Oregon, Pittsburgh, and Miami figure to be a little more competitive than Baylor, Utah State and Wake Forest.

6 Yards

"A lot of backs gain 100 yards a game, but there aren't many who gain six yards every time they touch the football," Switzer said. "Joe does."

Against Nebraska last season, the elusive halfback carried the ball 21 times for 142 yards for a 6.8 average.

Oklahoma's wishbone attack again will be operated by quarterback Steve Davis, but he'll be spelled quite frequently by Dean Blevins, a sophomore from Norman, who has been the No. 1 man in all preseason scrimmages as Switzer protects his proven stars from injuries.

Blevins has every ability possessed by Davis, but, of course, doesn't have the experience. He's getting it in preseason practice, however, while Davis watches. Blevins has run the first unit on all but ten plays so far this fall.

Look for the Sooners to challenge for everything in college football this season. They appear to be loaded.

This is an overall view of New Orleans' $163 million Louisians Superdome. Although the structure looks complete from the outside, inside work isn't expected to be done until the first of the year.

Osborne: No Truth To Anthony Rumor

By RANDY YORK

As Monte Anthony ran laps around the AstroTurf after Wednesday's Nebraska football practice, head coach Tom Osborne asked: "Is everything okay?"

Anthony nodded yes and grinned.

Osborne showed relief. He had received a phone call earlier Wednesday, indicating Anthony might not be eligible to play this fall.

If it were true, it would have been the proverbial last straw for Osborne.

"There wouldn't have been any doubt," Osborne told Anthony with a smile. "That (ineligibility) would have sent me straight to the top of the stadium. I would have jumped off."

The question involving Anthony's eligibility must have revolved around the university's constant confusion of reporting grades because he's one of the Cornhuskers' top scholars.

Record 'Amazing'

His academic record is amazing. In addition to playing football last fall, the 19-year-old Bellevue sophomore amassed 27

hours of A and B+ in engineering his first semester as a college student.

Anthony (6-3, 207) caused genuine concern last week, however. He was sidelined with a leg injury, but returned to practice last Sunday and led all rushers in a scrimmage with 71 yards on only nine carries.

Last fall, Anthony earned Big Eight Conference Freshman of the Year honors after leading the Cornhuskers in regular season rushing with 587 yards and a 5.4 per carry average.

He scored six touchdowns and added a seventh in Nebraska's comeback win over Florida in the Sugar Bowl.

Strains Knee

O'Leary strained a knee in a "dummy" punt return drill in Wednesday's practice. Tom Heiser, sharing No. 1 wingback duty with Curtis Craig, also was forced to leave practice early. He injured a toe during a dummy drill and was taken to the Student Health Center for x-rays.

Osborne sent Nebraska's third offensive and defensive teams through a 20-minute scrimmage in which Byron Stewart scored the only touchdown.

"That was a nice run," Osborne said of Stewart's effort. "It's the first time we've seen Byron healthy this fall."

Stewart, a sophomore from Maryland, likely will be redshirted this season if Nebraska's top three I-backs stay healthy, Osborne indicated.

The Nebraska coach said about 10 to 12 players could be redshirted, but those decisions wouldn't be made until two or three weeks into the regular season.

Circumstances Change

He recalled how O'Leary and Dave Shamblyn were redshirt candidates two years ago "when we got some people injured and others weren't playing too well and they had to come in against Minnesota."

"We hate to have a guy think redshirt when there's a chance he might have to play the third or fourth game," added Osborne.

Evert, Upset With King, Advances To Open Semifinals

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) — Chris Evert, disappointed and slightly upset at Billie Jean King's absence from the singles competition, Wednesday stroked her way into the semifinals of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships where she was joined by Virginia Wade, Martina Navratilova and Evonne Goolagong Cawley.

"If Billie Jean could play at Wimbledon, she should have played here," said Mis Evert following her 6-2, 6-1 victory over Australia's Kerry Melville Reid which put Chris into the last four for the fifth straight year.

"I think she should have defended her title," said Chris. "I've played Billie Jean on Sportese and grass surfaces and I would have liked to have played her on clay which is my surface."

Chris has never beaten Mrs. King on grass.

Billie Jean, who thwarted Chris' attempt to retain the Wimbledon crown by beating the Miss Evert in the semifinals and then went on to claim the Wimbledon title for the sixth time, is appearing at Forest Hills only in doubles.

Miss Wade, the second seed, defeated Katja Ebbinghaus of Germany 6-3, 6-0; Mrs. Cawley defeated Japan's Kazuko Sawamatsu who was troubled by a back injury, 7-6, 7-5, while third seeded Martina Navratilova defeated Margaret Court of Australia 6-2, 6-4 in the last of the tournament's night matches.

In the semi-finals, Chris, who has now won 82 straight matches on clay, meets Martina, the girl she defeated in the French and Italian finals earlier this year, while Miss Wade meets Mrs. Cawley.

The men who have gained the quarterfinals had the day off, but the big news among them was thh $8,000 imposed upon Ilie Nastase by the Men's International Professional Tennis Council for the Romanian's alleged lack of effort in the Canadian Open final three weeks ago in Toronto against Manuel Orantes.

But Miss Evert insists she is Nastase and Orantes meet Thursday for a semi-final berth. Nastase naturally announced that he would appeal the fine the council has levied.

Four years ago, Mrs. Reid upset Chris, then a fresh-faced 17-year old, 6-4, 6-2 in the semifinals with a mixture of lobs, drop shots and changes of pace. The 28-year old Kerry employed similar tactics Wednesday but this time, Miss Evert, virtually conceded the title, was ready for everything. The big surprise of the match came when Chris dropped service in the second game of the second set — only the eighth game she has lost in four matches thus far.

not happy about everyone talking as if she already has won the title.

"It's tough out there, you know," she said by way of admonishment.

Mrs. Cawley, who as Miss Goolagong reached the last two final here only to lose to Mrs. Court and Billie Jean, was in all kinds of trouble against Miss Sawamatsu. At the time she did not know of the Japanese girl's injuries.

Miss Sawamatsu's back, first injured two years ago, locked on her Tuesday night. Massage relieved the pain, but it returned during the pre-game warmup.

After the match, Miss Sawamatsu had to be removed to the first aid station in a wheelchair, but was allowed to return to her hotel after receiving physical therapy. The attending physician said she had suffered no serious damage.

Miss Sawamatsu held a set point in the 10th game of the first set and led 5-2 in the second, but each time Evonne wriggled free. She won the first set tie-break seven points to three while she took the last five games of thh deciding set.

"I didn't know whether to go to the net or stay back," said Evonne. "I was confused."

Miss Navratilova's young legs were too much for the 33-year-old Mrs. Court, a mother of two, who found the year's had caught up with her after a season in which her tournament appearances were restricted because of a nagging leg injury.

Martina, 18, outlith the veteran, who during her career has amassed 64 national singles championships, including five at Forest Hills. Margaret rallied late in the final set, but with the score 5-2 against her, it was too late. The sands of time had run out.

Miss Navratilova, hitting with the abandon and exuberance of youth, never allowed Mrs. Court to get to the net where she used to demoralize her opponents with her size and overhead game. The Czechoslovak also employed telling drop shots which sapped the stamina of the veteran.

Margaret was never in the first set in which she dropped her service in the third and fifth games. Only twice, in the fourth game, did she hold break points.

She trailed 3-0 in the second, and although she broke Martina in the fourth and eighth games, the break she suffered in the fifth to go behind 1-4 could not be overcome.

Miss Wade, who won but a single gmae off Chris in the tournament pre ceeding the Open, had little difficulty with Miss Ebbinghaus, once her big first service began to function in the second set.

East Meets Early Challenge

Tracing its roots back to ancient Greece, a spartan is a person of great courage and fortitude.

Never has Lincoln East's football team, also known as the Spartans, faced a greater challenge in living up to its nickname than this fall.

In an eight-day span, they'll play at North Platte (Thursday) and return to Lincoln to host Omaha Gross (Monday) and Grand Island (a week from Friday).

The pressure's on. All three opponents are physical football teams. And East, seeking its fourth state championship in five years, is Class A's pre-season No. 1-rated team.

A mixup, in which East contracted to play both North Platte and Gross on Friday, caused the revamped schedule.

Spartan?

By all means. Coach Lee Zentic realizes the stakes. He knows great courage and fortitude will be needed to meet such a heavy-duty challenge.

His team is favored to pass the test.

Mallory Sets CU Scrimmage

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — Colorado football Coach Bill Mallory has scheduled a scrimmage for Thursday, the last before the Buffs open the 1975 season against California Sept. 13.

Mallory said the closed drill will give him a last game-like view of the Buffs.

"The scrimmage will help determine the top players and give us, the coaches, a good look at the over-all team progress and problem areas," said assistant coach Dwight Wallace.

Quarterback David Williams appears to have a good hold on the starting job so far and has been effective in passing drills. Fullback Terry Kunz and tailback Tony Reed fill out the starting backfield.

Here's the season-opening card.

East at North Platte, Thursday night — North Platte offers a variety of problems, principally all-stater Kerry Weimaster at nose guard. But East usually has the answers.

Lincoln Southeast v. Lincoln Northeast, Friday night, Seacrest Field — This is the Capital City's version of a Missouri-Alabama season-opening blockbuster. The Rockets rate the edge, although no logical reason can be given.

Lincoln High at Grand Island, Friday night — Links' coach Jerry Ball, a GI native, is batting 1-for-3 in three close battles against the high school for which he played. The Islanders gain a slight edge, based on the home field.

Lincoln Pius X at David City Aquinas, Saturday night — The 'Bolts were fortunate to squeeze out a 7-6 win over Aquinas last fall. They're hoping such dramatics won't be needed this year.

In Friday's season-opening feature games, it's:

Omaha Westside at Bellevue — A collision of two pre-season rated teams. At home, Bellevue draws anywhere from 4,500 to 8,500 fans and that's one reason why the Chieftans rarely lose there.

Fremont at Hastings — The East Big 10 Conference starts its Fourth of July fireworks two months later than most people and Fremont's Greg Olson is dynamite for the occasion.

York at Central City — There's talk York should permit truancy until after the NSAA computes its enrolment figures for classification purposes. If the Dukes move back down to Class B, state championship talk will be hot and heavy.

Cozad at Ord — The pride of the Southwest and Central 10 conferences is at stake. Cozad scores one for the Southwest.

Holdrege at Minden — Holdrege is counting on a banner year, but Minden is prime ambush country.

Lexington at Superior — Lex's power gets tested in unfamiliar territory.

Nebraska City at Norris — This fall likely is Ken Kasperek's last year as football coach at Norris. That ought to mean something in this battle of pre-season Class B-rated teams.

In other Friday night games, Class C's pre-season No. 1 Geneva plays at Henderson, Class D's No. 1 Fairmont hosts Deshler and eight-man's top-ranked Farnam entertains Maywood.

Same, Old Sooners—Threat For Big 8, National Titles

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Norman, Okla. — Oklahoma's problems in football so far in preseason practice are superficial. The Sooners have a few players who are "hurting" but there are none who have injuries that will sideline them for the season.

The Sooners haven't lost a football game in their last 29 tries with only a tie to blemish that record. During that span, however, they've been virtually free of crippling injuries.

Since last season, there have been knee operations performed on nine Oklahoma players, including front liners Anthony Bryant, defensive tackle, tight end Keith Thomas and defensive end Duane Baccus.

Bryant and Baccus haven't fully ly recovered and Coach Barry Switzer considers them questionable at least for the opener here Sept. 13 against Oregon.

Pinched Nerve

Another injury in the same category is a pinched nerve which has sidelined Bill Dalke, the No. 1 choice to replace graduated three-time All-American Rod Shoate. It's the same type injury which plagued Nebraska middle guard John Lee late last season.

"He's our best linebacker," Switzer told Big Eight Skywriters Wednesday afternoon. "He has been out eight or nine days and it's questionable whether we can count on him. It's an injury that sometimes is slow to heal."

So much for the sob story, although the situation would be a concern with any football coach. It's difficult to believe the Sooners have run out of quality football players. The replacement might not be "super" but he certainly is a young man with ability.

In fact, Switzer indirectly said the same thing when he was asked to comment on the loss of Nebraska's top defensive tackle Ron Pruitt.

"With the type of program they have, they have to have someone capable of playing the position," the OU coach said. "The quality might fall off, but that doesn't put Nebraska in a 'give up' position."

OU Defense

Oklahoma will have a more-than-adequate defense, manned by the Selmon brothers, tackle

Leroy and nose guard Dewey, and such defensive secondary men as Sidney Brown, who Switzer says is the closest the Sooners have in the backfield to being a super player.

Any defensive deficiencies figure to be more than offset by what Switzer says will be the most talented offensive backfield OU has had, other than the 1971 and 1972 teams, and an offensive line that is more than adequate.

"We have the best depth we've ever had at quarterback," the Sooner boss said. "At halfback, we've got the most running back talent we've had."

Jimmy Littrell, quick-hitting fullback, returns to the spot where he averaged 6.7 yards a carry last season.

The star running back, of course, is Joe Washington, a fellow who is a legitimate Heisman Trophy candidate and Switzer indicated he's going to let him pile up impressive statistics in a bid to win the award.

"If Joe is to win we have to be successful early as a team," Switzer said. "Joe has to produce a lot of yardage early and we've got to win to help him. We're going to let him do all the playing he wants this season."

That could be bad news for OU opponents since Washington carried the ball only 194 times (an average of 17 a game) for 1,321 yards in 1974's 11-0 season. He was in on only six plays against Wake Forest, for example.

The tougher Oklahoma schedule might require his presence a little more since Oregon, Pittsburgh, and Miami figure to be a little more competitive than Baylor, Utah State and Wake Forest.

6 Yards

"A lot of backs gain 100 yards a game, but there aren't many who gain six yards every time they touch the football," Switzer said. "Joe does."

Against Nebraska last season, the elusive halfback carried the ball 21 times for 142 yards for a 6.8 average.

Oklahoma's wishbone attack again will be operated by quarterback Steve Davis, but he'll be spelled quite frequently by Dean Blevins, a sophomore from Norman, who has been the No. 1 man in all preseason scrimmages as Switzer protects his proven stars from injuries.

Blevins has every ability possessed by Davis, but, of course, doesn't have the experience. He's getting it in preseason practice, however, while Davis watches. Blevins has run the first unit on all but ten plays so far this fall.

Look for the Sooners to challenge for everything in college football this season. They appear to be loaded.

This is an overall view of New Orleans' $163 million Louisiana Superdome. Although the structure looks complete from the outside, inside work isn't expected to be done until the first of the year.

Osborne: No Truth To Anthony Rumor

By RANDY YORK

As Monte Anthony ran laps around the AstroTurf after Wednesday's Nebraska football practice, head coach Tom Osborne asked: "Is everything okay?"

Anthony nodded yes and grinned. Osborne showed relief. He had received a phone call earlier Wednesday, indicating Anthony might not be eligible to play this fall.

If it were true, it would have been the proverbial last straw for Osborne.

The question involving Anthony's eligibility must have revolved around the university's constant confusion of reporting grades because he's one of the Cornhuskers' top scholars.

Record 'Amazing'

His academic record is amazing. In addition to playing football last fall, the 19-year-old Bellevue sophomore amassed 27

hours of A and B+ in engineering his first semester as a college student.

Anthony (6-3, 207) caused genuine concern last week, however. He was sidelined with a leg injury, but returned to practice last Sunday and led all rushers in a scrimmage with 71 yards on only nine carries.

Last fall, Anthony earned Big Eight Conference Freshman of the Year honors after leading the Cornhuskers in regular season rushing with 587 yards and a 5.4 per carry average.

He scored six touchdowns and added a seventh in Nebraska's comeback win over Florida in the Sugar Bowl.

Strains Knee

O'Leary strained a knee in a "dummy" punt return drill in Wednesday's practice. Tom Heiser, sharing No. 1 wingback duty with Curtis Craig, also was forced to leave practice early. He injured a toe during a dummy drill and was taken to the Student Health Center for x-rays.

Osborne sent Nebraska's third offensive and defensive teams through a 20-minute scrimmage in which Byron Stewart scored the only touchdown.

"That was a nice run," Osborne said of Stewart's effort. "It's the first time we've seen Byron healthy this fall."

Stewart, a sophomore from Maryland, likely will be redshirted this season if Nebraska's top three I-backs stay healthy, Osborne indicated.

The Nebraska coach said about 10 to 12 players could be redshirted, but those decisions wouldn't be made until two or three weeks into the regular season.

Circumstances Change

He recalled how O'Leary and Dave Shamblin were redshirt candidates two years ago "when we got some people injured and others weren't playing too well and they had to come in against Minnesota."

"We hate to have a guy think redshirt when there's a chance he might have to play the third or fourth game," added Osborne.

Evert, Upset With King, Advances To Open Semifinals

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) — Chris Evert, disappointed and slightly upset at Billie Jean King's absence from the singles competition, Wednesday stroked her way into the semifinals of the U.S. Open Tennis Championships where she was joined by Virginia Wade, Martina Navratilova and Evonne Goolagong Cawley.

"If Billie Jean could play at Wimbledon, she should have played here," said Miss Evert following her 6-2, 6-1 victory over Australia's Kerry Melville Reid which put Chris into the last four for the fifth straight year.

"I think she should have defended her title," said Chris. "I've played Billie Jean on

Chris has never beaten Mrs. King on grass.

Billie Jean, who thwarted Chris' attempt to retain the Wimbledon crown by beating the Miss Evert in the semifinals and then went on to claim the Wimbledon title for the sixth time, is appearing at Forest Hills only in doubles.

Miss Wade, the second seed, defeated Katja Ebbinghaus of Germany 6-3, 6-0; Mrs. Cawley defeated Japan's Kazuko Sawamatsu who was troubled by a back injury, 7-6, 7-5, while third seeded Martina Navratilova defeated Margaret Court of Australia 6-2, 6-4 in the last of the tournament's night matches.

In the semi-finals, Chris, who has now won 82 straight matches on clay, meets Martina, the girl she defeated in the French and Italian finals earlier this year, while Miss Wade meets Mrs. Cawley.

The men who have gained the quarterfinals had the day off, but the big news among them was the $8,000 imposed upon Ilie Nastase by the Men's International Professional Tennis Council for the Romanian's alleged lack of effort in the Canadian Open final three weeks ago in Toronto against Manuel Orantes.

Nastase and Orantes meet Thursday for a semi-final berth. Nastase naturally announced that he would appeal the fine the council has levied.

Four years ago, Mrs. Reid upset Chris, then a fresh-faced 17-year old, 6-4, 6-2 in the semi-finals with a mixture of lobs, drop shots and changes of pace. The 28-year old Kerry employed similar tactics Wednesday but this time, Miss Evert, virtually conceded the title, was ready for everything. The big surprise of the match came when Chris dropped service in the second game of the second set — only the eighth game she has lost in four matches thus far.

But Miss Evert insists she is not happy about everyone talking as if she already has won the title.

"It's tough out there, you know," she said by way of admonishment.

Mrs. Cawley, who as Miss Goolagong reached the last two final here only to lose to Mrs. Court and Billie Jean, was in all kinds of trouble against Miss Sawamatsu. At the time she did not know of the Japanese girl's injuries.

Miss Sawamatsu's back, first injured two years ago, locked on her Tuesday night. Massage relieved the pain, but it returned during the pre-game warmup.

After the match, Miss Sawa-

matsu had to be removed to the first aid station in a wheelchair, but was allowed to return to her hotel after receiving physical therapy. The attending physician said she had suffered no serious damage.

Miss Sawamatsu held a set point in the 10th game of the first set and led 5-2 in the second, but each time Evonne wriggled free. She won the first set tie-break seven points to three while she took the last five games of the deciding set.

"I didn't know whether to go to the net or stay back," said Evonne. "I was confused."

Miss Navratilova's young legs were too much for the 33-year-old Mrs. Court, a mother of two,

who found the year's had caught up with her after a season in which her tournament appearances were restricted because of a nagging leg injury.

Martina, 18, outit the veteran, who during her career has amassed 64 national singles championships, including five at Forest Hills. Margaret rallied late in the final set, but with the score 5-2 against her, it was too late. The sands of time had run out.

Miss Navratilova, hitting with the abandon and exuberance of youth, never allowed Mrs. Court to get to the net where she used to demoralize her opponents with her size and overhead game. The Czechoslovak also employed telling drop shots which sapped the stamina of the veteran.

Margaret was never in the first set in which she dropped her service in the third and fifth games. Only twice, in the fourth game, did she hold break points.

She trailed 3-0 in the second, and although she broke Martina in the fourth and eighth games, the break she suffered in the fifth to go behind 1-4 could not be overcome.

Miss Wade, who won but a single game off Chris in the tournament preceeding the Open, had little difficulty with Miss Ebbinghaus, once her big first service began to function in the second set.

Judge Rules Player Limit At 60 For Tilts

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (UPI) — A federal judge ruled Wednesday night the National Collegiate Athletic Association does not have the right to restrict the size of football squads traveling to games away from their school.

U.S. District Judge Sam C. Pointer Jr., ruling on a suit filed by the University of Alabama, said he would issue an order preventing the collegiate athletic governing body from enforcing the new rule limiting the number of players on a team's traveling squad to 48.

The new NCAA rules limiting the size of home squads to 60 players and travel squads to 48 were adopted in an economy move at the NCAA special convention last month.

"Only the 60-man limit can be applied to both the home and visiting teams," Pointer said. "The court will enter a preliminary injunction forbidding the defendant (NCAA) from enforcing the limit as to sports events away from home beyond the squad sizes for at home events."

The judge said his decision was based on the NCAA bylaws which state that "it is implicit that actions must be consistent with fair competition."

Pointer said having one team with 60 players and one with 48

"is totally inconsistent with the basic concept of fair athletic competition."

The ruling came after more than four hours of testimony from NCAA officials, Alabama coach and athletic director Bear Bryant, former Auburn athletic director Jeff Beard and others.

Pointer said his decision applied to all schools under NCAA jurisdiction because Alabama, which filed the original suit, and Auburn University and the University of Missouri, who petitioned to join the suit "could properly represent other schools."

After the decision was announced, Bryant said he was glad all schools would be on equal footing and "I think it is great that it is all over, for everyone."

Stanley Lauds Defensive Unit

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma State head coach Jim Stanley lauded his defensive unit in the Cowboys' sweltering workout Wednesday and carried over his optimistic tone to the entire team.

"Our defense is really coming," Stanley said. "Our backs did a lot better today as far as getting in position and breaking on the ball is concerned. Joe Avanzini, Kent Shirley and Jerry Cramer were the defensive backs that caught my eye."

"Noseguard Richard Allen had a super day. He's been a pleasure to coach this fall. He has made great improvement."

The kicking game also caught Stanley's attention. He said that the punt coverage was the best of the year and All-Conference punter Cliff Parsley was kicking the ball well.

A Sports Roundup

FOOTBALL

San Diego State University, hopeful of getting into the NCAA's proposed super conference, pulled its football team out of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association. The school's president asked that the Aztecs be allowed to retain PCAA ties in all other sports.

The New York Giants traded wide receiver Bob Grim to the Chicago Bears for defensive end Dave Gallagher.

Center Mike McDaniel of Kansas has been cut by the Cleveland Browns.

The Dallas Cowboys traded third-year guard Jim Arneson of Arizona to Cleveland for an undisclosed draft choice.

BASEBALL

Nearly 75% of readers responding to a poll in The Sporting News favor having members of the all-star teams in baseball chosen by players instead of fans.

Yogi Berra's young son, Tim, cut by the Baltimore Colts, said he still wants to play professional football.

OTHER SPORTS

The New York Knicks said that no talks were planned with Chicago Bulls' center Nate Thurmond concerning the possibility of his joining the East Coast NBA club.

The Baltimore Hustlers, formerly the Memphis Sounds, named Joe Mullaney as their coach, expect to have new players Thursday and plan to have a new name shortly.

Billie Jean King has been chosen Player-of-the-year for 1975 by the Women's Tennis Association.

Ilie Nastase of Rumania was fined $8,000 for conduct reported detrimental to the game in the Canadian Tennis Championships in Toronto two weeks ago.

The California State Senate passed and sent to Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. legislation designed to assure female students the same opportunities as male students in school athletic programs.

Livingston To Start

KANSAS CITY (UP) — Quarterback Mike Livingston has played second fiddle to veteran Len Dawson for the past six seasons with the Kansas City Chiefs.

Now he's getting a chance to become a starter and is anxious for the opportunity.

Coach Paul Wiggins opened the Chiefs training camp with eight quarterbacks and said the younger men would be given an opportunity to beat the 40-year-old Dawson out of the starting job. Four quarterbacks remain on the squad and none has played a complete game in pre-season competition.

Wiggins, in his first year as coach, picked Livingston, 30, to start the next preseason game.

Safety Rules Set For Hunters

Safety Cards Required

Nebraska hunters heading out of state to do some big game hunting in Colorado, quail hunting in Kansas, pheasant hunting in South Dakota might be interested in knowing of those state's hunter safety requirements.

As you're probably already aware, many states are requiring hunters to attend and pass a hunter safety course before they are permitted a hunting license in that state.

Colorado is one of the 17 states requiring nonresidents to carry a hunter safety card if born after Jan. 1, 1949. The course must be NRA approved and the nonresident must have his certification card in his or her possession at all times.

Kansas requires anyone born after July 1, 1957, to be a card carrier before allowed to hunt. South Dakota requires a minimum of a four-hour course for youngsters ages 12-16 and Montana requires a 10-hour course for youngsters 12-18.

Nebraska and Iowa currently have no requirement but both offer young hunter safety certified courses through the Game and Parks Commission and Conservation Department. Both states highly recommend the training, however, and are leaning toward mandatory status.

Duck Clubs Arise

Down in southern Louisiana they are big on duck hunting. So big, they probably have as many duck hunting clubs as bass fishing clubs, the other passion for southern outdoorsmen.

As rumor has it, these duck clubs buy up large tracts of marsh land for hunting. It's big business in the south and they make the most of it.

There was one duck club which set itself up as a nonprofit organization and had a system of duck blinds which made it comfortable for club members to pole a boat out to for some hunting.

Then a problem arose. Somebody struck oil on the club's land. As a nonprofit organization, the club had trouble. They had to funnel the money back into the club marsh and facilities somehow to remain nonprofit.

It's All Outdoors

By Tom Vint

Now, on this particular section of southern marsh, is the most extensive system of concrete sidewalks to the most luxurious duck blinds in the world. That's not to mention the plush high rise hotel and restaurant sticking up in the middle of the marsh. Tough luck fellas.

In calendar notes, Friday's CBS airing of "The Guns of Autumn," a documentary on hunting with nearly half the show devoted to the animal's point of view, should be of interest to hunters. The National Shooting Sports Foundation encourages viewers to watch the 8:30 p.m. show and write the network with comments.

The Lancaster County Ducks Unlimited Chapter has scheduled next Wednesday for its annual fund-raising dinner at the Lincoln Izaak Walton League. A $20 cost covers meal and yearly DU membership. Door prizes and auction materials will be available.

Thomas, Fink Cut From Bills' Roster

Buffalo (AP) — Defensive back Earlie Thomas, once a regular for the New York Jets, was cut Wednesday by the Buffalo Bills of the National Football League.

The Bills also announced they had waived safety Mike Fink, former Missouri standout who signed as a free agent after being cut by Los Angeles.

Softball Win To Joint Bar

The Joint Bar of Omaha defeated Brent Village of Bellevue twice Saturday to capture the Nebraska Penal Corrections Complex Slow Pitch softball tournament.

The Joint Bar, which had lost earlier to Brent Village in the double elimination tourney, topped Brent 7-6 and 9-6 to earn the victory.

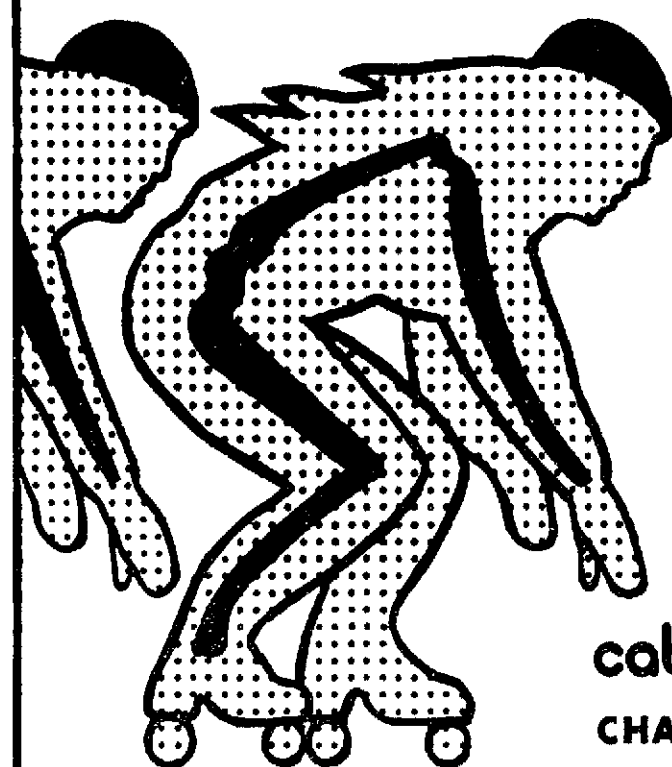

Finishing third in the meet was SAM's while Wentz-Commonwealth was fourth and the T Dorm of the State Penitentiary was fifth.

McCaney and freshman tight end Lloyd Sobek. Michaels and Sobek nursed bruises, and McCaney had a pulled leg muscle.

Already on the injured list are first string defensive tackle Paul VanSaun, starting offensive tackle Blake Thompson, second string halfback Skip Sharp and second team tight end Gregg Hosack, all slowed by leg injuries.

"We've got to get some people well in a hurry," said Coach Bud Moore. He announced a controlled scrimmage for Thursday to look for replacements.

In Canoe Race

Jackson, Wyo. (AP) — Governors from eight states, including Nebraska, have indicated they plan to send teams to the first Wyoming Governor's Cup
Challenge Canoe Race Sunday.

Other states which have responded to a challenge from Gov. Ed. Herschler are those from Washington, Oregon, Montana, Idaho, New Mexico, South Dakota and Utah.

The governors won't be taking to the water, but teams flying their colors will.

The race is scheduled along a 32-mile stretch of the Snake River near Jackson. Each governor has been asked to send three teams consisting of two persons each.

Oakland's Otto Retires

OAKLAND (UPI) — Jim
Otto, Oakland Raiders center who shares longevity records with teammate George Blanda, dropped out of the competition
Wednesday by announcing his retirement.

Otto, 37, and Blanda, 47, share the consecutive game streak for professional football at 210 league contests.

Blanda is still on the Oakland roster, but Otto announced at an unusual news conference that he was ending his career and becoming business manager of the team.

Raiders owner Al Davis introduced the longtime offensive center as "honored by his foes" and then turned the news conference dower to the 6-foot-2, 255-pound lineman.

Otto referred to numerous recent operations on his knees and said the emotions connected with the retirement had already been "passed on the field—the coaches couldn't tell this spring if it was perspiration or tears in my eyes."

The lineman, well known to the public by his number—00—started every regular-season game the Raiders have played since the franchise was founded in 1960 and has also participated in 74 preseason games, 13 postseason contests and 12 all-star games.

Only five players have participated in more regular season games for the National Football League, but part of the Otto's career was with the old American Football League.

The veteran center attended the University of Miami.

Davis said the Otto's number would be retired.

Legislators Set 6 Tax Meetings For September

The legislature's Revenue Committee has scheduled six meetings later this month on several taxation subjects.

The morning sessions will be devoted primarily to two pending bills, LB362 and LB506, both of which relate to financing public schools by income tax receipts.

Part of the afternoon meetings will include testimony on LB339 which would authorize any municipality or county to levy an additional sales tax of up to 3% on transient lodgings. Testimony also will be invited on different sources of tax revenue, including a sales tax on services.

The committee will solicit opinions on possible rescindment of the legal requirement that corporation income or franchise tax be included in determining a balance between sales and income tax revenues.

The hearings schedule:

Sept. 15, District Courtroom, Alliance; Sept. 16, North Platte City Council Chamber; Sept. 17, Auditorium, First National Bank, Grand Island; Sept. 18, Norfolk City Auditorium; Sept. 24, room 2102, Capitol, Lincoln; Sept. 25, Board of Equalization Room, Civic Center Building, Omaha

Walker Goes From Bologna To Martini
SAN DIEGO (AP) — Karl Wallenda's longest high-wire walk since 1970 began with a bologna sandwich and ended with a triple Martini.

The 70-year-old patriarch of the Great Wallenda family walked 680 feet across San Diego Stadium at a height of 130 feet Sunday as 9,876 persons at a baseball game watched silently.

Ushers tried to hold support wires taut after Wallenda noted that the wire appeared to be swaying. He said he had thought to himself that "I will be glad when I get off the other side."

School Board May Sue State Over Expenses

Omaha (AP) — An Omaha attorney has asked the Millard Board of Education to consider filing suit against the State of Nebraska to get more special education funds.

The suit would be aimed at recovering about $100,000 which was spent by the district on special education.

The district feels the state should reimburse it for the expenditures.

According to the original guidelines of LB403, the state law which mandated education for the state's handicapped children, school districts expected reimbursement for certain expenses such as diagnosis, heat and custodial service costs.

However, disputes over the service rules surfaced, and a new set of rules and regulations was issued. The new guidelines halt reimbursement for already-mentioned expenses and others.

"They changed the rules in the middle of the game," said Millard Supt. Donald Stroh.

During its next meeting, the school board is expected vote on the possibility of filing the suit.

Quake Rattles Iran

Tehran, Iran (AP) — A strong earthquake jolted two mountain regions in southwestern Iran, injuring three persons, two evening newspapers reported.

The Farm outlook is important. Complete coverage of the latest of importance to agriculture appears on the "Sunday Journal and Star" farm page.

Medical Schools Face Financial Crunch

Omaha (UPI) — Nebraska's two medical schools are facing a financial crunch due to a decrease in federal funds, officials of the University of Nebraska Medical Center and Creighton University said Wednesday.

Thomas Smith, the NU Medical Center's business and financial administration executive director, said the university may have to ask the Unicameral for a deficit appropriation to compensate for a $1.6 million loss in federal funds this year.

Dr. Robert Heaney, Creighton's vice president for health sciences, said his problems will begin during the 1977-78 school year when as much as $3 million in federal funds won't be coming into university coffers. The funds have been used to finance the operations of Creighton's medical, dental and pharmacy schools.

"We'll get by this year," Heaney said, "but the crunch will come next school year."

Heaney said the federal government has reduced the funds in hopes schools would become self-sufficient, but he noted Creighton is one of an estimated 10 to 15 schools without large endowments.

While efforts will be made to obtain additional financial aid for students, Heaney said a sub-

Steel Output Rises

New York (AP) — Steel production climbed to 2,038,000 net tons in the week ended Aug. 30, an increase of 3.9% over the preceding week's 1,962,000 net tons, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported.

stantial tuition increase for students in the three Creighton medical schools was on the horizon. He said no decision has been made on whether the fund reduction would necessitate a decrease in faculty members. Smith said the Medical Center was budgeted to receive $900,000 in federal funds to help switch from a four-year to a three-year medical curriculum, but the grant wasn't renewed this year by the federal government. "We are presently addressing the problem of how to make up for the loss of federal funds," Smith said.

Walker Goes From Bologna To Martini

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Karl Wallenda's longest high-wire walk since 1970 began with a bologna sandwich and ended with a triple Martini.

The 70-year-old patriarch of the Great Wallenda family walked 660 feet across San Diego Stadium at a height of 130 feet Sunday as 9,876 persons at a baseball game watched silently.

He Calls 'Em Names But Wouldn't Sell 'Em

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

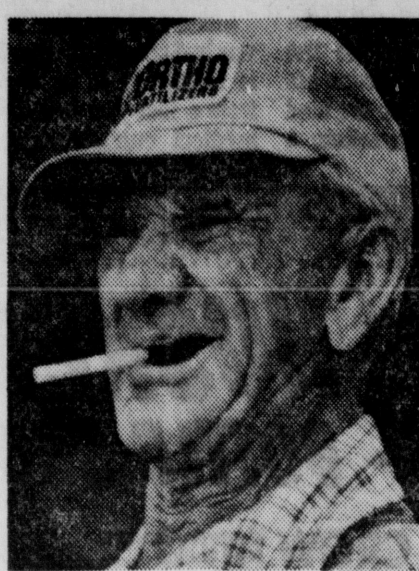

Orville "Shorty" Medaris may call his horses every name in the book when they're not pulling like they should, but he wouldn't sell one for anything.

The 74-year-old retired farmer from Fredonia, Kan., said he couldn't give his secrets to the press because "then you'd print 'em and everybody'd know."

After thinking it over a moment he decided "No, you couldn't print it... even if I told ya."

Shorty, who has been entering pulling contests for close to 25 years, said it's "just kinda a hobby. I'd like to make enough to pay my expenses but seein' all the people and makin' friends — that's the kick you get out of it."

Every spring the same people "all get together and really whoop it up."

'Shorty' Medaris

He said he likes the kids, especially, that run up "all excited" when he unloads his team. Although they weigh about a ton and a half together, Mike and Doc are both gentle so sometimes he lets the youngsters climb aboard.

In Wednesday's test of horse power at the State Fair, Shorty's Belgian-Perchon mixed breed team pulled across the finish line in fifth place. The two giant horses towed 6,000 pounds — almost three times their weight — 7 ft., 4 in.

It was far from the best pull of the afternoon, but good enough so Shorty could pocket some prize money and head on down to Hutchinson, Kan., for the next meet.

When they're not pulling, the horse handlers turn into horse traders, each trying to get a better combination than the next.

Shorty claims that pulling horses are born, not trained.

"They have to have the heart to pull. If they don't, they'll bulk," he said. His horses must have awfully strong hearts because Shorty and his helpers can barely hitch them to the sled.

"When they hear the link go in, they're gone," Shorty said. "And they stop pulling when they hear the whistle." They don't pull any more than they have to.

His blue eyes get as big as horseshoes and he grins a toothless grin when he talks about his "sweetie" who's only 60.

"All I got to do is wait two more years and we'll be able to get hitched," he figures. "That's when she'll get her Social Security check."

Take a step 10 years into the future — but don't count on being able to find your way around the County-City Building.

With an additional level built across the current south parking lot, the building at 555 S. 10th will bear only a superficial resemblance to today's structure, according to a 10-year plan outlined in a 120-page report prepared by Greathouse-Flanders Associates.

Inside the building only a handful of offices will retain their present locations over the next decade.

Law, jail and court-related functions, which already take up 54% of the total building space, will eventually overrun two floors and half of the basement, first and fourth floors, according to the three-month long study.

Fifth Floor Rejected

The planners, hired by the County-City Building Commission for the $15,500 study, apparently rejected a plan to add a fifth floor to the building.

Instead, they recommended putting a 100,000 square foot addition over the south parking lot. The addition, called the Central Complex, will house at least four county departments and eight city agencies within the decade.

The departments recommended for Central Complex space are county engineering, treasurer, clerk and assessor and city real estate, public works, engineering, inspections, traffic engineering, public utilities, planning and community development.

In preparing the report, the planning group estimated that city personnel now located in the building will rise from 598 to 830 and county employees from 280 to 467 by 1985.

Space Need Estimated

And the two governments will need an anticipated additional 101,550 square feet during the next 10 years, the report said.

Both county and city departments have been complaining of growing pains for several years.

Only nine of the 45 county and city departments showed no need for growth in the 10-year plan, according to the report.

Departments with the greatest anticipated growth included data processing, personnel, community development, municipal court probation, county attorney, clerk of the county court, public defender and adult probation.

Growth in these areas is anticipated because of expansion of federal and state programs and changes in procedures through new legislation, the report explained.

Overlay Maps

Using overlay maps, the space study shows how offices may be juggled and moved around during the next five and 10 years in order to meet these growing needs.

Changes which the planners believe should begin immediately include the following:

- County Board should use the City Council chambers, opening up the board's hearing room as a second county courtroom.
- Relocate the public defender's office (now cramped on fourth floor) to the first floor area currently occupied by the driver licensing department and a portion of the county treasurer's tax division.
- Move data processing into areas now occupied by real estate, community development and city printing. Move these three city departments out of the building to return in five to 10 years.
- City building inspections should take over offices on the east side of the first floor water and sewer department.
- Add personnel application room on first floor.
- Add additional municipal court and put parking ticket function on first floor.
- Expand city traffic engineering into portion of holding room outside the police elevator.

The recently printed report will be formally presented to the Building Commission Tuesday morning.

Peery's Attorneys Challenge Evidence

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

A decision on the validity of a lower court ruling that Wesley Peery should stand trial for the murder of Marianne Mitzner will probably be made next week.

Lancaster District Court Judge Samuel Van Pelt, who will make the decision, made the estimate after courtroom arguments Wednesday afternoon.

At issue is a "plea in abatement" made by Peery's attorneys after County Judge Jeffrey Chevront ordered Peery bound over for trial following a preliminary hearing.

The plea challenges the validity of the order on the grounds that the evidence presented during the preliminary hearing was not strong enough.

Attorney Don Hays told Van Pelt that the defense is not challenging that crimes of robbery and murder were committed.

'Probable Cause'

The point of contention, he said, was whether Lancaster County Attorney Ron Lahners had established that there was "probable cause" to believe that Peery committed the crime.

Lahners argued that he had shown that Peery, by his own admission, was in the vicinity at the time of the murder.

He contended that coins found in a toolbox in Peery's apartment were similar to coins stolen from the Mitzner Rare Coin Shop, in that some had been ultrasonically cleaned and some had been lacquered.

A rag found at the murder scene, he said, was similar to those used in the Nebraska Wesleyan University boiler room where Peery worked.

Rope Said Similar

A rope found in the boiler room, Lahners argued, was similar to one found in the coin shop, where Mrs. Mitzner was found shot three times in the head on June 6.

Hays, however, argued that evidence was that Peery told police he was in Havelock about 8:30 a.m. A doctor's testimony, he said, placed the time of death between 9 and 11 a.m.

Thus, he contended, testimony at the preliminary hearing was that Peery was not in Havelock at the time of the shooting.

He contended that although coins were found in a toolbox in Peery's room, "there was no evidence they were placed there by Mr. Peery."

Not Identified

Kenneth Mitzner, husband of the dead woman, he said, testified he could not make a positive identification of the coins, Hays asserted.

Four Crewmen Survive B52 Aerial Explosion

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — Three of seven crewmen aboard an Air Force B52 on a training flight were dead or missing Wednesday after the aircraft exploded in the air and crashed near Aiken, officials said.

Four survivors were taken to the Dwight David Eisenhower Army Medical Center at nearby Ft. Gordon in Augusta, Ga., where they were reported in good condition.

Survivors were identified as Capt. James A. Perry, 29, the pilot, of Princeton, W. Va.; Capt. Donnell R. Exum, 27, of Smithfield, N.C.; Capt. Gregory A. Watts, 27, of Morganton, N.C.; and 2nd Lt. Hector Marquez, 24, of Brownsville, Tex.

First Lt. Melvin M. Bewley, Jr., 25, of Birmingham, Ala., and Sgt. Ricky K. Griffith, 21, of Cedarville, N.J., were listed as missing, and 1st Lt. Grady E. Rudolph, 26, of Lafayette, Ind., was killed, officials said.

The aircraft was based at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, N.C., and carried no nuclear or other weapons, according to an Air Force spokesman.

Wreckage was scattered across fields and woods. Police set up roadblocks to keep curiosity-seekers away from the site near Montmorenci, a small community five miles east of Aiken.

The cause of the explosion was not known, and an investigation was under way, the Air Force said.

Four Crewmen Survive B52 Aerial Explosion

AIKEN, S.C. (AP) — Three of seven crewmen aboard an Air Force B52 on a training flight were dead or missing Wednesday after the aircraft exploded in the air and crashed near Aiken, officials said.

Four survivors were taken to the Dwight David Eisenhower Army Medical Center at nearby Ft. Gordon in Augusta, Ga., where they were reported in good condition.

Survivors were identified as Capt. James A. Perry, 29, the pilot, of Princeton, W. Va.; Capt. Donnel R. Exum, 27, of Smithfield, N.C.; Capt. Gregory A. Watts, 27, of Morgantown, N.C., and 2nd Lt. Hector Marquez, 24, of Brownsville, Tex.

First Lt. Melvin M. Bewley, Jr., 25, of Birmingham, Ala., and Sgt. Ricky K. Griffith, 21, of Cedarville, N.J., were listed as missing, and 1st Lt. Grady E. Rudolph, 26, of Lafayette, Ind., was killed, officials said.

The aircraft was based at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, N.C., and carried no nuclear or other weapons, according to an Air Force spokesman.

Wreckage was scattered across fields and woods. Police set up roadblocks to keep curiosity-seekers away from the site near Montmorenci, a small community five miles east of Aiken.

Staying Ahead Benefits For Elderly Poor Delayed, Unfairly Denied

By JANE BRYANT QUINN
New York — The annals of survival in this country should include the struggle now being waged by the elderly poor to achieve the welfare benefits due them by law. The Supplemental Security Income program, passed by Congress in 1972 and put into effect last year, is supposed to provide all the elderly, blind or disabled poor with a specified minimum income.

But in the confusion of poorly trained administrators, sloppy handbooks and computer disasters, many people's benefits are being seriously delayed or unfairly denied.

Attention has centered on the fact that the program ran up $403.8 million in overpayments in its first 18 months. But there also has been a serious problem of underpayments, amounting to $35 million.

The Social Security Administration, which runs the program, points out that although there are indeed problems benefits are paid retroactively to the date the person first applied. But one Legal Aid lawyer snapped "People can't eat retroactively. They can't pay their rent retroactively. These interminable delays are causing tremendous hardship."

It's so bad in fact that the Western Center on Law and Poverty in Los Angeles has sued to impose time limits on the processing of SSI applications. And in New York the Center on Social Welfare Policy and Law has won suits to assure people adequate warning of a change in benefits, and to prevent the government from arbitrarily withholding checks to make up for past overpayments.

What You Should Do
Here's the background on SSI and what you should do if you're having trouble getting a claim paid.

Under this law, Congress did away with the many state welfare programs for the aged, blind and disabled and rolled them all into one federal program. The benefits, however, are strictly at subsistence level, so about half the states supplement federal payments with money of their own. Social Security administers the state supplement as well as SSI, so if there's trouble with one, there's usually trouble with both.

SSI is only for the very poor. It provides a destitute couple with as little as $2,839 a year — compared with the $4,228 the Labor Department says a retired urban couple needs to sustain a lower-level standard of living. The highest possible payments, combining SSI, Social Security and the California supplement, come to $3,349 a year.

In general SSI starts with a maximum allowable benefit ($137.70 a month for an individual, $236.60 per couple) and deducts from that whatever income you have. The first $20 of unearned income (such as Social Security payments or workman's compensation) isn't counted. If you work they give you the first $65 of your monthly earnings and after that, reduce your benefit by $1 for each $2 you make.

After deductions for income the average SSI payment to the aged works out to around $90 a month. The blind and disabled who are eligible for some special supplements average around $140.

An individual is permitted assets (such as bonds or savings accounts) worth up to $1,000, and a couple $2,250. Anything over that you must dispose of if you want an SSI check. Generally, speaking household goods, personal items and insurance policy even a car if you need it to drive to work or the doctor's office won't count as assets unless they're particularly valuable. You can have a house with a market value of up to $25,000.

System Works Slowly
If you take care of someone who qualifies for SSI but is unable to manage his own funds, you can arrange to receive the checks in his behalf. That is, if you can arrange for checks at all. Social Security is accustomed to working with people whose daily needs are not as urgent as the elderly poor, and so their systems work slowly. It can take months to get an application through.

In the old days, an aged and needy applicant for Social Security could be referred to the state welfare system for assistance while his federal claim was being processed. But now Social Security processes both. Only a handful of states have any sort of mechanism for providing tide-over funds while waiting for an SSI approval. The wonder is that some of these elderly poor survive at all.

Equally serious is the claim improperly turned down, or paid in the wrong amount. Social Security currently has two handbooks containing policy interpretation of the SSI rules. They're sometimes in conflict and some of the advice they contain is inaccurate, incomplete or simply too muddled to decipher. Readers have sent me several letters from SSI administrators, and I couldn't make head nor tail of them.

So if you're turned down for SSI but think you're eligible, by all means appeal your case. The Social Security office will explain the appeals procedure.

Adele Blong, of the Center on Social Welfare Policy and Law, believes you stand a better chance of winning if you have a Legal Aid lawyer at your side. "I used to think people did just as well representing themselves before the Social Security Appeals Board," says Blong. "But now I see that unless they have professional help they might not get what the law promises."

Stock Prices Veer Upward; Volume Light

New York (AP) — The stock market veered upward Wednesday in some cautious buying attributed to hopes for an early decision on a plan for New York City's financial future.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 8.60 to 832.29 reflecting particular strength in some of the blue chips.

In the broader range of the total of 1,747 issues changing hands on the New York Stock exchange, gainers barely outnumbered losers 682 to 643.

Big Board volume remained sluggish at 12.26 million shares, compared with 11.46 million Tuesday.

The NYSE's composite index picked up 2.4 to 45.79, and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose .55 to 86.03.

Prices drifted listlessly within a few points of Tuesday's close through most of the day, starting to pick up some upward momentum about an hour and a half before the close.

Analysts found no specific news development to account for the upswing.

But they said it looked as though investors were taking a hopeful look ahead at the special session of the New York State Legislature called for Thursday to take up ways of dealing with New York City's cash problems.

No matter what particular approach might be settled on the reasoning went it might at least resolve the uncertainties posed by the city's plight that have been hanging over the market for the past several weeks.

Brokers said the market also got a bit of a lift late in the morning from Federal Reserve operations in the short-term money markets that seemed to be designed to keep interest rates from rising.

Among the blue chips, Procter & Gamble was ahead 2 1/2 at 85 1/2. DuPont gained 1 1/2 to 123. Eastman Kodak added 1 1/2 to 92 and International Paper rose 1 1/2 to 59 1/2.

Texasco the Big Board volume leader slipped 1/2 to 23 1/2. A 99,000-share block traded at that price.

Copperweld stepped on the active list jumped 7 1/2 to 42. The company said a French concern planned a $42.50-a-share offer for all of its stock and Copperweld directors said they would urge holders against tendering their shares.

Moore McCormack Resources, which reported plans for a 2-for-1 stock split and an increased cash dividend climbed 8 1/2 to 67 1/2.

NL Industries slipped 7/8 to 14 1/2. The company said it might have to suspend operations at its Utah magnesium plant to correct technical problems.

Gold stocks gained ground, rebounding from some heavy selling Tuesday that followed an announcement of an International Monetary Fund group's plans for gold sales.

Homestake Mining rose 2 to 39. ASA Ltd. 1 1/2 to 35 1/2. Dome Mines 1 1/2 to 40 1/2 and Campbell Red Lake Mines 1/2 to 23 1/2.

The American Stock Exchange market value index dropped 29 to 85.61.

Staying Ahead

Benefits For Elderly Poor Delayed, Unfairly Denied

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — The annals of survival in this country should include the struggle now being waged by the elderly poor to achieve the welfare benefits due them by law. The Supplemental Security Income program, passed by Congress in 1972 and put into effect last year, is supposed to provide all the elderly, blind or disabled poor with a specified minimum income.

But in the confusion of poorly trained administrators, sloppy handbooks and computer disasters, many people's benefits are being seriously delayed or unfairly denied.

Attention has centered on the fact that the program ran up $403.8 million in overpayments in its first 18 months. But there also has been a serious problem of underpayments, amounting to $35 million.

The Social Security Administration, which runs the program, points out that although there are indeed problems, benefits are paid retroactively to the date the person first applied. But one Legal Aid lawyer snapped: "People can't eat retroactively. They can't pay their rent retroactively. These interminable delays are causing tremendous hardship."

It's so bad, in fact, that the Western Center on Law and Poverty in Los Angeles has sued to impose time limits on the processing of SSI applications.

And in New York, the Center on Social Welfare Policy and Law has won suits to assure people adequate warning of a change in benefits, and to prevent the government from arbitrarily withholding checks to make up for past overpayments.

What You Should Do Here's the background on SSI, and what you should do if you're having trouble getting a claim paid:

Under the law, Congress did away with the many state welfare programs for the aged, blind and disabled, and rolled them all into one federal program. The benefits, however, are strictly at subsistence level, so about half the states supplement federal payments with money of their own. Social Security administers the state supplement as well as SSI, so if there's trouble with one, there's usually trouble with both.

SSI is only for the very poor. It provides a destitute couple with as little as $2,839 a year — compared with the $4,228 the Labor Department says a retired urban couple needs to sustain a lower-level standard of living. The highest possible payments, combining SSI, Social Security and the California supplement, come to $3,348 a year.

In general, SSI starts with a maximum allowable benefit ($157.70 a month for an individual, $236.60 per couple), and deducts from that whatever income you have. The first $20 of unearned income (such as Social Security payments or workman's compensation) isn't counted. If you work, they give you the first $65 of your monthly earnings and after that, reduce your benefit by $1 for each $2 you make.

After deductions for income, the average SSI payment to the aged works out to around $90 a month. The blind and disabled, who are eligible for some special supplements, average around $140.

An individual is permitted assets (such as bonds or savings accounts) worth up to $1,500, and a couple $2,250. Anything over that you must dispose of if you want an SSI check. Generally speaking, household goods, personal items, an insurance policy, even a car if you need it to drive to work or the doctor's office, won't count as assets, unless they're particularly valuable. You can have a house with a market value of up to $25,000.

System Works Slowly If you take care of someone who qualifies for SSI but is unable to manage his own funds, you can arrange to receive the checks in his behalf. That is, if you can arrange for checks at all. Social Security is accustomed to working with people whose daily needs are not as urgent as the elderly poor, and so their systems work slowly. It can take months to get an application through.

In the old days, an aged and needy applicant for Social Security could be referred to the state welfare system for assistance while his federal claim was being processed. But now Social Security processes both. Only a handful of states have any sort of mechanism for providing tide-over funds while waiting for an SSI approval. The wonder is that some of these elderly poor survive at all.

Equally serious is the claim improperly turned down, or paid in the wrong amount. Social Security currently has two handbooks containing policy interpretation of the SSI rules. They're sometimes in conflict, and some of the advice they contain is inaccurate, incomplete or simply too muddled to decipher. Readers have sent me several letters from SSI administrators, and I couldn't make head nor tail of them.

So if you're turned down for SSI but think you're eligible, by all means appeal your case. The Social Security office will explain the appeals procedure.

Adele Blong, of the Center on Social Welfare Policy and Law, believes you stand a better chance of winning if you have a Legal Aid lawyer at your side. "I used to think 'people did just as well representing themselves before the Social Security Appeals Board,'" says Blong. "But now I see that unless they have professional help they might not get what the law promises."

Police Chief Nominee Has Always Considered Nebraska Home

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

"Nebraska has always been home to us," said the man nominated to the Lincoln's next police chief.

"That's the number one reason I applied for the job. It's the place my youngsters call home." Two of George K. Hansen's five children go to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Speaking by phone from his public safety director's office in Sunnyvale, Calif., the 54-year-old Hansen said he likes Lincoln because it "has a strong sense of community development."

"I've only walked through the (police) department. It's premature to talk of changes," he said.

"My impression is that it's always been a good police department and has done a fine job over the years."

The department Hansen has been managing since 1971, however, in many ways bears little similarity to Lincoln's police department.

In Sunnyvale, he said, public safety personnel are trained to be both firefighters and police officers but each is assigned a primary role. Then every year about 25 or 30 of them decide to switch roles for a time.

"Our public safety officers (of which the city has 172) respond to fire calls as trained firefighters," Hansen said.

"I think it's good for Sunnyvale. It would be difficult to install in a city with established police and fire departments."

Not Planning Merger

"Heavens no, I'm not coming to Lincoln with the idea of consolidating the police and fire departments."

In Sunnyvale Hansen has involved the department in some programs which would be considered innovative by local standards.

Hansen said he established a "neighborhood resource officer" project in which an officer was assigned to work directly with a neighborhood in addition to regularly assigned patrol cars.

The officer, he said, held block meetings on subjects like burglary prevention, and spent time getting acquainted with the people living in the neighborhood.

'Who To Go To'

"People know who to go to when they have a problem," Hansen said.

He said the department is involved in diverting youngsters from the criminal justice system into alternative programs.

Last year, he said, the department worked with citizen task forces to develop plans and goals for the coming year.

Officers in Sunnyvale carry 9 millimeter automatics with 13 shells in a clip, as opposed to the .38-caliber revolver that is standard issue in Lincoln.

A 9 mm. weapon fires a slightly smaller and much lighter bullet than the standard police pistol.

Choice Of Bullets

The officers may use either the controversial hollow-point bullets or jacketed bullets, he said. Lincoln police use hollow-points.

He said he does not believe in using a bullet which causes excessive damage. He noted, however, that the "safety of the officer on the street comes first."

He said the written policy of the Sunnyvale police is that a gun is not to be used unless a citizen's life is in danger, or unless a suspect has committed a crime which indicates he might be a danger to life and limb in the community.

Sunnyvale has an unaffiliated police union like the one established in Lincoln last week, Hansen said.

Hansen believes such unions should not be permitted to take decisions on "how to spend the taxpayers' money from the hands of elected officials" or "management decisions out of the hands of the chief."

"Strikes such as the one by police and firefighters in San Francisco," he said, "do not deserve the name of professionalism."

In basic terms, Hansen said he believes a police department can do little without the support of the community.

And in one respect he'll blend right into life in the Lincoln community.

"Whenever Nebraska plays football on TV we have the Nebraska fight song on the hi-fi, and my wife, who used to be a pom-pom girl, dances around the room," he said.

If Hansen Not Confirmed, Mayor Says Search Process Will Resume

If George K. Hansen is not confirmed by the City Council, no alternates in the final six will be nominated, Mayor Helen Boosalis said Wednesday.

"The search would go on," she said at a press conference at which she announced her nomination of the man selected from 90 applicants.

She said Hansen was the only candidate among the final six recommended for chief by a five-member committee.

She described Hansen as a "top-notch administrator, sensitive to the public's needs, with a clear idea of his role and the police role in a democratic society."

Mayor Confident

Admitting that there have been reports of morale problems in the police department, Mrs. Boosalis said she was "confident when they are exposed to the man they will feel as I and the committee did."

The mayor said it "was a difficult thing for me to do" to pick Hansen over Dale Adams, assistant chief and acting chief who has been in the department since 1947.

She said Adams is a man of decency and integrity and hopes that he will stay with the department.

The 54-year-old Nebraska native nominated by Mrs. Boosalis graduated from Falls City High School and attended the University of Nebraska in Lincoln.

He then enlisted in the U.S. Army, where he spent most of his career in the military police.

Retired In 1967

He retired in 1967 as a lieutenant colonel and director of resident instruction at the U.S.

Army Military Police School.

He spent two years as chief of the criminal division in the St. Louis County sheriff's office, two years as chief of police in Glastonbury, Conn., and two years as director of public safety in Oak Park, Mich.

Since 1971 he has been director of public safety in Sunnyvale, Calif.

Unanimous Choice

Hansen was the unanimous choice of the five-member selection committee, according to two committee members, Fred Holbert and Councilman Bob Jeambey.

"It was apparent that one candidate stood out. It was the unanimous decision on the part of the committee that he met the mayor's qualifications," Holbert, vice chairman of the Department of Criminal Justice at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, said Wednesday.

In fact, the selection committee did not even rank the other five candidates interviewed, Holbert said.

Hansen totally combined what the mayor said she wanted in a police chief, which included law enforcement experience, good, progressive leadership abilities, sensitivity to community needs and the ability to manage a multi-million-dollar operation, Holbert said.

No 'Big Fuss'

Hansen appeared to be the kind of man who could identify and resolve departmental internal problems "without making a big fuss about it," Jeambey added.

The fact that Hansen was a Nebraska native with strong local ties was a factor in his favor, both Holbert and Jeambey agreed.

"Some of the candidates appeared to be on their way from some place. Hansen appeared to be on his way to some place and that place was Nebraska," Holbert said.

The long selection process included the use of two citizen selection committees. The first committee narrowed the field from 90 candidates to 22. Then a second committee, using only social security numbers to identify the candidates, selected six men for interviews.

The top contenders included Hansen, Lincoln's Acting Police Chief Dale Adams and Community Relations Officer Leighton Wessel.

2 From New York

The three other men were a Minnesota man and two men who recently retired from the

New York City police. One of the men is currently working in Colorado.

The screening committee conducted interviews with the six men Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 25 and 26. After finishing the last interview after midnight Tuesday, the committee informed Mayor Helen Boosalis of their unanimous choice, Holbert said.

All 90 candidates were asked to answer three hypothetical situations. These were what they as police chief would do if:

— The department was accused of harassment and a double standard of law enforcement.

— The town had a relatively low but increasing crime rate.

— The department had a problem with a high turnover rate among young officers.

Reaction To New Police Chief Divided

Jeambey, Mrs. Bailey and Robinson voiced positive support for Hansen.

Mrs. Bailey, who sat in on portions of the interviews with the out-of-state candidates, said she was impressed with the search committee and would put her faith in their judgment.

Too Early To Tell

"I don't think testing the water right after the rock has splashed is a true way to judge the final outcome," said Jeambey about council members' initial reactions to the nomination.

In one respect, rank-and-file patrolman in the department will approve of the selection of Hansen, police union leader Hill indicated Wednesday.

"I truthfully feel that the patrolman level would like to have an outside chief with no allegiance to anyone," he said.

Able To Offer Changes
"He can bring in modern ideas and make changes the department needs," Hill said.

The command ranks of lieutenant and above were for Adams "just by the nature of their job, working for Carroll and Adams," Hill said. If forced to make a decision between Adams and Wessel, Hill said, he believes the patrolman would have chosen Wessel.

Hill said that six months of working without a permanent police chief had been "kind of demoralizing," but added "now we can start looking forward to some changes."

Both Adams and Wessel indicated they will decide in the next few weeks whether to leave the department.

Going To Paint House
"I don't know how long it will take me to make up my mind," Wessel said. "I think I'll take some time off and paint my house."

"I'm not down dragging the floor and in the dumps," he said. "It's somewhat of an honor to be in the last six."

Adams said, "I would be less than truthful if I didn't say I was disappointed." He said the six-month delay while he was acting chief was difficult, "but not as difficult for me as for the department."

He said it could be a week or a month before he decided what his plans are. He said he had "nothing in mind at the present time."

Beware 'The Dangers Of Office'

LOVELAND, Ohio (AP) — People who are elected to high office should watch when they step down.

Take the case, for example, of Loveland Mayor Viola Phillips. She recently had to have someone turn the pages during a wedding ceremony because she had both her arms in a cast. The reason? She broke them during a fall in her living room. On Friday, June 13, the mayor missed a step and fell at Ohio State University. The result? She had to preside at a council meeting with her leg in a cast because of her broken ankle.

Before that, Her Honor tripped at a local restaurant and broke the other ankle.

"I just hope the council members take everything into consideration when they vote on confirmation."

Police Chief Nominee Has Always Considered Nebraska Home

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

"Nebraska has always been home to us," said the man nominated to the Lincoln's next police chief.

"That's the number one reason I applied for the job. It's the place my youngsters call home." Two of George K. Hansen's five children go to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

Speaking by phone from his public safety director's office in Sunnyvale, Calif., the 54-year-old Hansen said he likes Lincoln because it "has a strong sense of community development."

"I've only walked through the (police) department. It's premature to talk of changes," he said.

"My impression is that it's always been a good police department and has done a fine job over the years."

The department Hansen has been managing since 1971, however, in many ways bears little similarity to Lincoln's police department.

In Sunnyvale, he said, public safety personnel are trained to be both firefighters and police officers but each is assigned a primary role. Then every year about 25 or 30 of them decide to switch roles for a time.

"Our public safety officers (of which the city has 172) respond to fire calls as trained firefighters," Hansen said.

"I think it's good for Sunnyvale. It would be difficult to install in a city with established police and fire departments."

Not Planning Merger

"Heavens no, I'm not coming to Lincoln with the idea of consolidating the police and fire departments," Hansen said.

In Sunnyvale Hansen has involved the department in some programs which would be considered innovative by local standards.

Hansen said he established a "neighborhood resource officer" project in which an officer was assigned to work directly with a neighborhood in addition to regularly assigned patrol cars.

The officer, he said, held block meetings on subjects like burglary prevention, and spent time getting acquainted with the people living in the neighborhood.

'Who To Go To'

"People know who to go to when they have a problem," Hansen said.

He said the department is involved in diverting youngsters from the criminal justice system into alternative programs.

Last year, he said, the department worked with citizen task forces to develop plans and goals for the coming year.

Officers in Sunnyvale carry 9 millimeter automatics with 13 shells in a clip, as opposed to the .38-caliber revolver that is standard issue in Lincoln.

A 9 mm. weapon fires a slightly smaller and much lighter bullet than the standard police pistol.

Choice Of Bullets

The officers may use either the controversial hollow-point bullets or jacketed bullets, he said. Lincoln police use hollow-points.

He said he does not believe in using a bullet which causes excessive damage. He noted, however, that the "safety of the officer on the street comes first."

He said the written policy of the Sunnyvale police is that a gun is not to be used unless a citizen's life is in danger, or unless a suspect has committed a crime which indicates he might be a danger to life and limb in the community.

Sunnyvale has an unaffiliated police union like the one established in Lincoln last week, Hansen said.

Hansen believes such unions should not be permitted to take decisions on "how to spend the taxpayers' money from the hands of elected officials" or "management decisions out of the hands of the chief."

In basic terms, Hansen said he believes a police department can do little without the support of the community.

And in one respect he'll blend right into life in the Lincoln community.

"Whenever Nebraska plays football on TV we have the Nebraska fight song on the hi-fi, and my wife, who used to be a pom-pom girl, dances around the room," he said.

If Hansen Not Confirmed, Mayor Says Search Process Will Resume

If George K. Hansen is not confirmed by the City Council, no alternates in the final six will be nominated, Mayor Helen Boosalis said Wednesday.

"The search would go on," she said at a press conference at which she announced her nomination of the man selected from 90 applicants.

She said Hansen was the only candidate among the final six recommended for chief by a five-member committee.

She described Hansen as a "top-notch administrator, sensitive to the public's needs, with a clear idea of his role and the police role in a democratic society."

Mayor Confident

Admitting that there have been reports of morale problems in the police department, Mrs. Boosalis said she was "confident when they are exposed to the man they will feel as I and the committee did."

The mayor said it "was a difficult thing for me to do" to pick Hansen over Dale Adams, assistant chief and acting chief who has been in the department since 1947.

She said Adams is a man of decency and integrity and hopes that he will stay with the department.

The 54-year-old Nebraska

native nominated by Mrs. Boosalis graduated from Falls City High School and attended the University of Nebraska in Lincoln.

He then enlisted in the U.S. Army, where he spent most of his career in the military police.

Retired In 1967

He retired in 1967 as a lieutenant colonel and director of resident instruction at the U.S.

Army Military Police School.

He spent two years as chief of the criminal division in the St. Louis County sheriff's office, two years as chief of police in Glastonbury, Conn., and two years as director of public safety in Oak Park, Mich.

Since 1971 he has been director of public safety in Sunnyvale, Calif.

Unanimous Choice

Hansen was the unanimous choice of the five-member selection committee, according to two committee members, Fred Holbert and Councilman Bob Jeambey.

Jeambey, Mrs. Bailey and Robinson voiced positive support for Hansen.

Mrs. Bailey, who sat in on portions of the interviews with the out-of-state candidates, said she was impressed with the search committee and would put her faith in their judgment.

Jeambey, a member of that committee, called on fellow council members not to make Hansen's confirmation "a political game ... to place the interest of the community above personal feelings or commitments."

Hill said that six months of working without a permanent police chief had been "kind of demoralizing," but added "now we can start looking forward to some changes."

Both Adams and Wessel indicated they will decide in the next few weeks whether to leave the department.

Going To Paint House

"I don't know how long it will take me to make up my mind," Wessel said. "I think I'll take some time off and paint my house."

"I'm not down dragging the floor and in the dumps," he said. "It's somewhat of an honor to be in the last six."

Adams said, "I would be less than truthful if I didn't say I was disappointed." He said the six-month delay while he was acting chief was difficult, "but not as difficult for me as for the department."

He said it could be a week or a month before he decided what his plans are. He said he had "nothing in mind at the present time."

Before that, Her Honor tripped at a local restaurant and broke the other ankle.

Former Police Chief Joseph Carroll, who ran the department for more than twenty years before retiring in March, said he will "stand by his conviction" that Adams is the best person for the job.

"I think it's quite a blow to the police department personnel," Carroll said. "I think Dale Adams would have been a logical choice."

"I just hope the council members take everything into consideration when they vote on confirmation."

Hansen appeared to be the kind of man who could identify and resolve departmental internal problems "without making a big fuss about it," Jeambey added.

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

By SIDNEY OMARR

Forecast for Thursday

The dreams of Cancer reflect fear of poverty, an empty larder, loss of loved ones - the dream, for Cancer, symbolizes what occurs when the best things in life are taken away. The Cancer dream, on another level, is symptomatic of a technical, filled with luxury, wine cellars, French chefs, ample women and strong men. The classical Cancer native's dream could include an institution, a place of confinement, a bright, full moon, eccentric people and pennies from heaven which gradually are transformed into $20 gold pieces. When Cancer dreams, it is no laughing matter - hot or cold, rich or poor, no middle ground. Green usually makes Cancer wake up with a ravenous appetite. Some Cancer celebrities include Geraldine Rivera, Roosevelt Grier, Arthur Asher, Neil Simon, Ann Linder and Merv Griffin.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You have right to live life of your own. It is not selfish to desire comfort and love. Know it and "let loose" from individual who takes and gives nothing in return. You get proverbial second chance. Take it and run - into a more productive future!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accent on home ground, a new relationship which enables you to build and create. Leo, Aquarius could be involved. Use lessons learned in recent past. Check facts, figures. Your position is stronger than might be apparent. Know it and request consultation with "money person."

GEMINI (May 21-June 21): Relatives may be pulling you in more than one direction. Study Aries message. Short trip could be in order. Gather information and synthesize it. Your ideas are worthy and should not be dismissed. There are bright spots which could "catch on" and be abetted with enlightenment.

CANCER (June 22-July 22): If flexible, you save money and make contacts which enhance future earning potential. If you insist on adhering to status quo, you could pay dearly for the privilege. The choice is your own. Gemini and Leo could figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You do some rebuilding, remodeling, tearing down for purposes of ultimate improvement. Your personality shines and you draw to you persons who can clear away debris of red tape. Aquarius and Scorpio individuals could be in picture. Continue to take initiative.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Changes occur in your "near" priorities. Means you no longer have same reasons for delay or timidity. What was a cause of concern is eliminated. Are you going to create new "hang-ups"? Key to making most of current cycle is to plow through to progress, to refuse to revert to groundless fears.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Gift, special anniversary or celebration is likely to be featured. Home, family situation becomes a happier area. Harmony could prevail. Key now is to be diplomatic, to be receptive to music, to say, "I love you."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may be asked to back up certain claims, statements. Know it - don't promise more than can be delivered. Pisces, Virgo individuals figure prominently. One "in charge" has personal problem and may confide it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You learn the "mystique" of money. A legal advisor becomes less a dilemma. You are able now to act in your own behalf, to better protect personal interests. Now you are able to finish a task which had been delayed, shoved aside, even ignored. You get rid of losing proposition.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): New, more independent approach to contractual obligations is necessary. Fulfill promises but refuse to be intimidated. You do have right of appeal. Know it and utilize full scale of resources. Someone is sending you a signal.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pace slows and it is for your own benefit. Digestion, health in general can improve as you get proverbial second wind. You build security; you improve financial status. You now are able to talk business and get favorable response.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are direct, analytical, capable of interpreting trends, of overcoming odds, of breaking from tradition and creating your own traditions. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. This is a power year, and September is your most significant month of 1975.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 4 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 4, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
